

GAMES

Reality is games

Games is reality

© 2025-2026 As yet unnamed and unformed charitable organization to mitigate and stop hunger and malnutrition, and other cool things. All rights reserved. minor change for upload checkl

Contents

1	Dedication	5
2	Veritas Verificatur Omnia Vincit	7
3	Authors' Note	9
4	Prologomenon	11
5	Diagrams	17
6	Transformation	29
7	Games	35
7.1	The Basic Games	35
7.2	Intellectual Games	38
7.3	Emotional Games	38
7.4	Learned Games	39
7.5	Born Games	39
7.6	Sexual Energy Games	42
7.7	Miscellaneous Games	42
7.8	Song Games	47
8	Sayings	51
9	Crystal Vision	55
10	The Perfect Diet aka Anti SAD Food Diet	57
11	Skin the Largest Organ in the Body and the Immune system	63

12 Exercise	67
13 Doctor Doctor	69
14 Odds and Ends	71
15 Prayer	77
16 Purgatory - Conscience, Understanding, Helping Others	89
17	91

Chapter 1

Dedication

This volume is dedicated to the memory of the world's greatest and last Spiritual Teacher, and also to all those who came before him. We owe a debt of gratitude to these brilliant Men who posed great questions:

Why are things the way they are?

and the more specific and fascinating version:

What is the sense and significance of life in general, and particularly, the aim and purpose of the life of man?

and unceasingly devoted their lifetimes towards finding answers, and elucidating them for the rest of us. They have left huge and erudite bodies of work without which we would not be at this point. You may well ask: AND WHAT POINT WOULD THAT BE, MY FRIEND? We now have the possibility of not only a spiritual evolution for every human being, but perhaps, a spiritual revolution for all mankind. If the world's greatest Spiritual Teacher is watching from some other plane of existence, we hope he'll be chuckling in his inimitable way and announcing: "WELL SAID!"

We miss you and hope there is some version of reality in which we meet again!

Chapter 2

Veritas Verificatur Omnia Vincit

Verified Truth Conquers All Things

In these Games you must believe nothing except to the extent that you can verify it. First of all is simple common sense. If someone tells you that they can reach the highest level of spirituality at any time they want, then they close their eyes and say Ohm three times and claim to have done so, there is no way you can verify this, and anyone who believes it probably needs to rethink a few things. You can also verify by using whatever knowledge you already have. If someone suggests a certain diet, is it something that would generally be considered reasonable? Verification by your own personal experience is better. If you have tried something, you will be in a much better position to make an informed judgement on the matter. You can think of this as three levels of verification, common sense, general knowledge, and personal experience and knowledge thereof. It is also very important and useful to do some research on the internet, something which is immediately available to much, if not most, of the world's population today. Many things have been scientifically proven, and this can help. You should also carefully check your sources, investigate opposing points of view, make sure you are using the information in an appropriate context and give it a quick sniff test. (A lot of stuff is put out there by commercial and other interests which have a vested interest , often making money, and plenty of money and power to get the results they want and make sure they are promulgated.)

If someone tells you that a certain Games will help you if you learn and practice them for a while, it is not unreasonable to evaluate this and give it a try. If you are willing to put in the effort and actually try, at some point you will notice some results which can serve as further verification beyond common sense and even, eventually, beyond general knowledge and personal experience. One of the objectives of these Games is to produce understanding, which is a function of the higher emotional center. This is not a yes or no thing, but a process which will continue for your whole life! Human beings are incredible creatures, and every time your understanding increases, you have the chance to see more and more intricate, complex, and beautiful things in yourself and others. This endless personal journey towards becoming YOUR best YOU will be a glorious end in itself, and allow you to serve your fellow human beings ever more and more, better and better, and in ways you can not yet imagine!

Learning is finding truth in yourself and others and amassing the requisite knowledge to do so. Teaching is what happens when two or more players of The Games get together. Doing is using those truths to advance along your inner path and help others to do the same. We are all learners, teachers, and doers, after we start The Games.

If you help others, you will be helped, perhaps tomorrow, perhaps in 100 years, but you will be helped. Nature must pay off the debt....It is a mathematical law and all life is mathematics.

In order to know everything you only have to know a little bit, but in order to know that little bit, you have to know quite a lot, so we have to start from “quite a lot” with the idea of getting to that “little bit”.

Chapter 3

Authors' Note

There are many different types of men, and what a man is comes from many different sources: parents, religion, siblings, peers, teachers, society, mass media and even random events in life. As young human beings, we vacuum up impressions from all sources and try to make sense of a very confusing reality. At certain points in one's life, a person may realize that there must be more than the "sensual-perceived-reality" he has thus far understood. If such a man encounters appropriate knowledge, he may be able to begin an amazing inner (spiritual) journey. In such a case it is imperative for him to figure out what he has been, what he is, and what he may possibly become. While everyone's inner journey is in certain respects unique, in other ways we all share many common traits and goals. It will be necessary to carefully consider what we have been and are, in order to be able to advance towards what we wish to become.

Sometimes it is easier to see certain traits in others than in oneself, especially things we consider less than optimum. We all think we are much better people than we really are. Seeing our foibles is a life long task and, especially in the beginning, sometimes a little painful. It is an integral part of the journey, and before long you will relish these revelations and value them greatly! Luckily there are protections built into us which keep us from ever seeing more than we are ready for or can handle. The more we see in ourselves, the greater our ability to help others will become!

Theoretically, everyone has the possibility to follow their true inner path. You have the right not to be negative. But it takes effort and cunning. If you ask a man to sacrifice his pleasures they will sometimes go to amazing lengths and endure mightily. What about your suffering? Are you willing to sacrifice your suffering? Are you willing to give up your “righteous indignation”, fear for the fate of the world, or desire for revenge when you encounter some angry, self-righteous, hopeless idiot? Do you think there is absolutely no hope for this guy? So how 'bout you realize that this guy is an incredible opportunity for you? Instead of just letting your normal mechanical negative emotions and thoughts flow, say: HOW CAN I BECOME ENOUGH TO BE ABLE TO TALK TO THIS GUY, AND MAYBE EVEN HELP HIM? We don't know what percentage of people on this earth can be helped, but together we intend to find out! It's probably a LOT more than any of us can yet imagine!

Chapter 4

Prologomenon

Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you. — Luke 17:21

Science people and Religious people often put themselves on opposite sides of many issues. Sciencers see the historical carnage that we have perpetrated on ourselves, and conclude that spiritual is bad. (Its worth noting that most religioners heartily agree with the first part of this, but come to the opposite conclusion.) Religioners see the moral decay of our society and are aghast. (Its worth noting that most sciencers will agree with this.) What none of them realize is that both sides are making the same mistake! Spiritual documents such as the Bible, Koran, Hindu scriptures, etc. are all primarily spiritual in nature. Their primary purpose is to guide our inner (spiritual) development! What you are looking at is not many competing views on how to run the world, but different perspectives, ways of looking at and describing the same INNER SPIRITUAL JOURNEY. This journey is the key to mankind's next steps in its evolution, and has the possibility to take us past the fighting, squabbling, and killing that has thus far been the norm for our human race.

This idea of an inner God is foreign to sciencers and religioners alike. It is, however, well known to the 12 steppers of the world, who have taken this concept to heart and practiced it from a multitude of different starting points of view. (See AA's Big Book) They have found that this idea of an inner, personal God is practicable by pretty much anyone, and its efficacy has been shown over and over, millions of times, often producing results that are miraculous not only to those directly involved, but many outside observers as well.

What has this got to do with us? you may ask. We're not alcoholics or addicts. We don't need these so-called miracles! Well, let's imagine that scieners and religioners both took this to heart and starten practicing it. Could such a sciencer, realizing that God is within him, possibly learn to speak christian and to pray alone and with others? Could he perhaps go to a church and interact civilly with the religioners? Could such a christian go to a science gathering learn to speak science without even being uncomfortable? The most interesting thing here is that both points of view, God within and outside of us have truth and merit. For example, all human beings have egos a lot bigger than they should be, and this fact causes a superabundance of problems, both for each of us personally, and in the world at large.

People who are ready to begin an inner (spiritual) journey must be ready to look inside of themselves and strive to change and improve themselves. It important to note that IN ORDER TO HELP YOURLELF, YOU MUST HELP OTHERS. Turning your attention inside of yourself and helping others to do so, is a first key step in the process, a metanoia or change of mind that is paramount. In life we often think that we must make a choice between helping others or helping ourselves. In almost all situations if you look at a few more possibilities, we will be able to find a course of action that better for both or all parties involved. One object of these Games is to give us the tools to do this. The diagrams give the basic knowledge necessary to better understand ourselves and others. One of the most prominent features of our beings is the tendency to bring things down to only two choices. This type of binary thinking is a necessary prerequisite for all of our worst negative emotions. By looking inside of ourselves we can begin to find a multitude of other ways to manifest in life that do not involve either of the two possibilities initially presented by our habitual ways of thinking and feeling. The more you practice this, the better you will get at it, and begin to soar above the binary, yes or no thinking and feeling that keeps us trapped in the lowest parts of ourselves. This is an amazing freedom that no one ca ever take away from you. So come, look inside, discover the innumerable possibilities which await you in the higher parts of yourself, which is not only your right, but you duty!

Man as a 3 Story Being

Cherish

Spiritual Level

Higher Emotional Higher Mental

Understand

See

Help

Emental Level

Emotional

Intellectual

Love

Know

Heal

Physical Level

Born

Learned

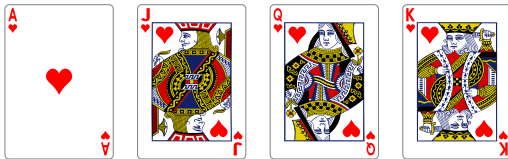

Eat

Move

Emental & Physical Levels

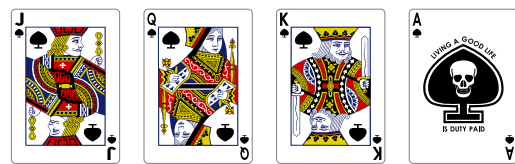

Help

Emotional

Love

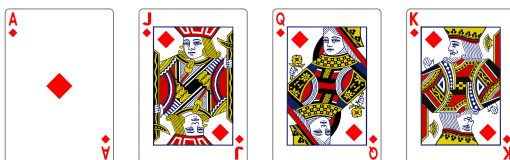

Intellectual

Know

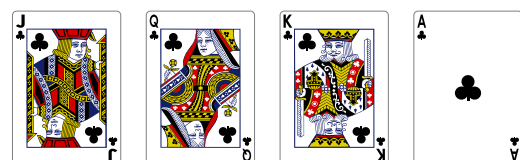

Heal

Born

Eat

Learned

Move

S
p i r
i t u
a l

L
e v
e
l

Higher

Mental

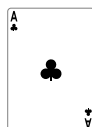

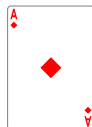

Cherish

See

Higher

Emotional

Understand

Chapter 5

Diagrams

These three diagrams, Man as a 3 Story being, Cards Emental and Physical, and Cards Spiritual should always be kept handy. It is good to open them in separate browser tabs on whatever devices you are using. Feel free to print them out if you are so inclined.

Man has seven centers: Higher Mental Center, Higher Enotional center, Intellectual Center, Emotional Center, Learned Center, Born Center, and Sex Center. The functioning of higher centers is quite miraculous; and explains why some of Man's "higher" moments seem to go beyond the "sensual-perceived-reality" of his lower centers. Each center is an independent brain with its own memories, associations, and will. Higher Centers are fully functional but Man, in his present state, has little or no contact with, or control or knowledge of them. Higher centers will function properly if the four lower centers function pproperly. (Born, Learned, Emotional, Intellectual.) The sex center is unique in that it can be thought of as related to our highest spirituality, our our lowest, most base impulses, and everything in between! This is one of the ideas expressed in the four story diagram at the end of this chapter. As we start out in the Games, it is fortunate that we only have four centers with which to concern ourselves: Intellectual, Emotional, Learned, and Born. Understanding what these centers, or brains are, what is wrong with them, and how to fix them is paramount if we want to eventually become fully functional human beings.

Man as a 3 Story Being

This is the main diagram, and the foundation for all that follows. The cards diagrams are expansions of this diagram, adding a huge amount of new knowledge. Note that in the cards Emental & Physical Levels diagram the two levels of the diagram correspond to the two lowest levels of Man as a 3 Story Being diagram. The cards Spiritual Level diagram, is arranged in two levels to make everything fit on the page, but both levels would sit side by side on the top level of the Man as a 3 Story Being diagram. Our spiritual level is made up of our lower levels, or, to put it another way, our higher centers will be made up of our lower centers when we have perfected our lower centers sufficiently. It is not like a light switch, on or off, but a gradual process that proceeds at a rate commensurate with the quantity, quality, and vigor of our efforts! This is a life long endeavor, and we will find things on the Spititual Level that are beyond our wildest dreams!

We have to start our with the physical and emental levels because only by fixing them can we start the process of awakening higher centers. Also, this broken, twisted, and neglected machine is all we have to play with. One of the main objectives of the Games is to help us fix our machines, i. e. our bodies, feelings, and thoughts. It won't take too much studying of the diagrams and ourselves before we start to understand, a little here, and a little there. And where do you think understanding comes from? That would be the Higher Emotional center! Do you understand, even just a little? You have just made a tiny little bit of progress towards getting your higher centers working better and better. As you progress, you will learn to make larger and larger steps, jumps, leaps, and bounds. You will eventually see that your personal inner (spiritual) journey is not merely a linear progression, but some kind of geometric or arithmetic progression!

Let us start on the physical level. On the left side is the born center, which entails everything we are born with. We start life with an amazing machine that does all the stuff that human bodies do. For the most part it just does what it is supposed to do. We see, hear, smell, taste and have the sensation of touch. We don't have to learn to do these things, they're just there and we can use them. We eat food and our bodies metabolize it giving us energy to survive, flourish, and regenerate. Our bodies know how to breathe and regulate our breath so we always have the right amount of oxygen for our current activity level. It is very lucky that we do not have to direct all this from our emental level, because we could not and would quickly die. It is very dangerous to artificially alter some functions such as breathing and heart rate, because its possible that you could permanently damage your body's ability keep itself going. We do, however have some control over our born side. Diet and exercise are the two most important things here. If we give our bodies the wrong fuel, and we all do to some extent, it will cause serious problems on the higher levels. Everyone can probably improve their exercise routines. Most of us need to drastically increase them. Some probably just need some tweaking, and others, such as professional athletes, may need to back down before they permanently damage themselves any more. Lastly are drugs. In our modern society the use of drugs, legal and illegal is rampant. There are no drugs that will help you on your inner journey towards higher centers. The best policy is to eschew all of them, even over the counter pain relievers, to the extent that your medical condition permits.

On the right side of the Physical Level is the Learned center. It contains physical stuff that we have had to learn in our lifetimes. Standing, walking, running, and whatever sports we enjoy operate pretty much automatically, which is a good thing because it would be REALLY inconvenient to have to learn to walk every morning when we wake up. There is also a lot in here which is unnoticed by us and not so good for us, such as jiggling your knee up and down, tapping your fingers, fidgeting, nail biting, shifting in your seat, and grinding your teeth. This type of manifestation is always connected to negative emotions, and learning to see and control both the physical manifestation and the underlying negative emotions is one of the most important parts of our inner, spiritual path. It is important to note that this center is a LOT faster than our intellectual center. Some people have given the figure 30,000 times faster. There is no way to verify exactly how much faster the learned center is than the intellectual center, but it is pretty easy to see that it is much faster by trying to think out every little motion when you are walking or playing some sport. You can use the intellectual center to analyze a ping pong shot, and figure out how to improve in the future, but if you try to actually do the shot with the intellectual center, you will lose the game.

The Emental level has the Emotional center on the left, and the Intellectual center on the right. Notice that the Emotional center is directly above the Born center. This is important because there is a similar relationship between the centers on this level as those on the lowest one. We are born with certain basic emotional functions, and these parts of us more or less function correctly. As we grow up, we learn a lot of negative emental stuff from parents, peers, teachers, media etc. At a very young age children have learned a complex set of negative Emental responses from imitating things in their environment. The large majority of this is harmful to ourselves and others and needs to be obliterated. The Intellectual Center is on the right side of the Emental Level, and thinking is much more of a learned thing than emotions. People have to be taught how to think properly. It is easy to see that thoughts and emotions go hand in hand. If we are in a bad mood, we will have bad thoughts; if we are in a good mood we will have happy thoughts. The Emotional center is much faster than the Intellectual center, and it should function even faster than the Learned center. Since our Emotional center is clogged up with so much harmful stuff, it is probably functioning about as fast as the Learned center. This difference in speed makes it very difficult, and often even impossible to use thoughts to stop negative emotions. When that guy cuts you off on the road, that anger springs up immediately and leaves the Intellectual Center in the dust like the Road Runner does to Wile E. Coyote! Besides thinking, the Intellectual center is also in charge of knowledge. Human beings have an incredible, almost limitless, capacity to learn, which is the process of acquiring new knowledge. By learning what is going on inside yourself, and what needs to be changed, you are giving yourself a solid launching point for your own amazing inner (spiritual) odyssey!

On the Spitual Level the Higher Emotional and Higher Mental centers have a similar born and learned relationship as on the lower levels. The Higher Emotional center has several properties, dim reflections of which we can see in ourselves and others. It is the seat of understanding, conscience, and the urge to help others, becoming “we humans” rather than “me among humans”. This last human trait, is something that, in terms of evolution, was developed in various animals, notably herd animals, as a survival mechanism. Another aspect of the Higher Emotional center is the ability to experience all of our emotions simultaneously. It has been said that if this center was artificially awakened before our lower centers were sufficiently purified, it could drive us insane. It has also been said that if the Higher Emotional center were somehow opened prematurely, it could freeze all of our negative emotions in us as they are, so that we had no chance of repairing ourselves. Luckily, we have built-in protections which normally keep this from happening. It is necessary to see these sort of reflections, or shadows of Higher Emotional center inside of ourselves and others, but you have to be very, very careful with this. Whenever you see something that you think is a manifestation of higher centers, it always comes with a large dose of egotism, which is something that must be severely, and even brutally limited in ourselves. There is nothing that will stop your inner (spiritual) safari as quickly and thoroughly as thinking you have already arrived. This is something that has been well known since antiquity, but no one has ever really figured out a way around it. Pride, vanity, and egotism are so deeply entrenched in human beings that we must guard against them our whole lifetime! We must be more clever, sly, persistent, and more vigilant than possible to avoid the trap of egotistically thinking that we have finished the journey, or even that we have really made such good progress on it. This is probably the most important single concept that you will ever learn.

Emental and Physical Cards

The fact that common playing cards were designed to show us the inner (spiritual) structure of human beings was “discovered” last century by a man who did an intricate and fascinating analysis of musical octaves. Many people feel a fondness for and kinship with the cards from the first time they see them. Is it possible that some parts of us realize they are being talked about, on some levels? Knowing what we are will allow us to see many things in ourselves which had previously been hidden, which in turn will help point the way along our inner (spiritual) path. The Games are designed to help us grow into the beings we have the right to be. (You have the right not to be negative!) Each center is assigned a suit. Born diamonds, Learned clubs, Emotional hearts, and Intellectual spades. The aces represent the whole center and the jack, queen, and King different parts of the centers. They are differentiated by the type, quality, or quantity of attention operating in the center at any given moment. The lowest part of the center is the jack, which represents the center operating with no attention, just kind of idly ticking along according to whatever random habit patterns it has from copying things in its environment. The queen represents attention drawn by something outside. The king represents attention purposely directed towards proper inner (spiritual) growth. This is the highest part of the center. Ideally, we want to have a balance of some kind:

“A man should be able to give a total of 30 for everything taken together. This figure can be obtained only if each center can give a certain corresponding number—for instance $12 + 10 + 8$

“If 30 is correctly a true manifestation of man and this 30 is produced by three centers in a corresponding correlation, then it is imperative that the centers should be in this correlation.”

There are two ways this applies to the centers. First, it should apply to the Physical, Emotional, and Intellectual, having their proper function in our being as a whole, i.e. Physical, Emotional, and Intellectual being 8, 10, and 12 respectively. In the same way the jack, queen, and king in each center should correspond similarly as parts of each center i.e. jack, queen, king... physical, emotional, intellectual... 8, 10, 12... Don't try to be too literal and precise about this, the idea is to give us a general idea of how our machine should function, and of the idea that there is a correlation between the machine as a whole and the makeup of each center individually. Let's look at some examples from each center.

The Born center, the diamonds, that with which we are born on the physical level. Our five senses fall into this category. They work primarily with the jack and queen of diamonds. Our senses are always working automatically. This is a good thing because we could not consciously direct them all the time. The born center works at too high of a speed. When an impression comes in to one of the senses, the queen kicks in and our attention is drawn to the sound, movement, change in temperature, smell, or taste. Examples of the king of diamonds could include observing our body and modifying our diet or exercise to improve our health.

The jack in the Learned center, the jack of clubs, includes things like walking, running, and a multitude of big and little things we do every day. These things we do automatically, which is very good and even necessary. Imagine having to stop and relearn all this kind of thing every time we needed it. When learning a new sport, video game, or musical instrument, for example, we are teaching the Learned center. As we progress the queen starts working with the jack to respond to outside events. By practicing movements over and over they become faster and faster and more and more complex. Our Intellectual center can aid us while learning something new by analyzing some things and giving suggestions after the fact. As our skill level increases, we will start to gain access to the king of clubs. People who get really good at any physical endeavor, will be able to use the king of clubs to do amazing things. A good example of this is great musicians who can create incredible works of art. As we clean up the various parts of our machine, we will gain more and more access to the king of clubs.

The Emotional center, the hearts, is where our biggest problems are concentrated. We exist mostly in the jack, which is constantly flitting here and there following the queen, which is responding to various impressions coming both from outside of us, and also from inside us. We exist as a continuous stream of pleasant and unpleasant emotions. It is important to note that negative emotions, which for the most part need to be disposed of, can be either pleasant or unpleasant. Pleasant and unpleasant emotions come in pairs, for example depression and excitement. One will flip to the other at any time for any or no reason, and we have little or no control over this. Here is a way out: WE NEED TO TRANSFORM BOTH SIDES OF THESE COINS INTO POSITIVE EMOTIONS! Positive emotions cannot exist in the lower centers. They begin in the Higher Emotional center, and are an integral part of the Higher Mental Center. The next diagram, Cards Spiritual Level shows this in exquisite, wonderous detail. There are several ways we can identify positive emotions and separate them from the normal lower emotions which fill our daily lives. Firstly, they do not flip flop into negative emotions. They simply are, and with proper nurturing and prolonged efforts, they will grow, multiply, and expand. Second, they always come with a gift of understanding. This could be about any part of us Physical, Emental, or Spiritual, or about the true nature of things or people in the world. Third, they have a different taste, a particulat flavor which is quite distinct from anything in the lower parts of our being. If we put in right efforts, which is one way to describe the objective of these Games, we will get results. One obstacle that must be overcome, especially in the beginning, is that we do not always get immediate results. Impatience is one of the negative emotions which must be dealt with, and it can present a hard row to hoe! Similarly to the Learned center, by practicing the proper use of the jack and queen of hearts, we will eventually gain the ability to use the king of hearts. Imagine what it would mean if we had full control of our emotions, and were able to direct them to manifest for the good of ourselves, others, and even the whole world!

The Intellectual center is where we have the most control of all the lower centers. It is by far the slowest of the centers because, as with the other centers, it is not working properly. We, once again, live almost entirely in the jack of spades. One quality of the jack of spades is that it can only count to one or two. Whenever we see things as having only one or two possibilities, we are almost certainly using the jack of spades. The correct function of the jack of spades is to record, catalog, and organize information, and then hand this over to the queen and king of spades, or any other part of the lower centers as appropriate. The jack of spades should never be answering questions, but only digging up the proper information and handing it on. It is easy to see this in ourselves and others. Whenever there seems to be only one or two options in a situation, it is surly the jack of spades manifesting. (Do you see how the last sentence is a good example of this kind of thinking?) One way to start to get away from this is to come up with at least three possibilities in any given situation. The jack of spades cannot handle three options, so it will be forced to hand it off to the queen of spades and, with enough practice, eventually, to the king of spades as well. Another way to coax the jack of spades to behave better is to give true knowledge which is complex enough that it cannot process it without the help of the queen of spades and the king of spades. These Games are an example of such knowledge. Learning the rules of the Games, the diagrams, and specific techniques for practicing the Games will necessitate that the jack on spades start to step down to its rightful place. As the Intellectual center starts working better and better, it will be able to help us tame the rogue elephant which is our Emotional center.

Spititual Level Cards

This is where the rubber meets the road, where things get really, really fascinating! The two higher centers are made up of almost entirely THE SAME CARDS from the previous diagram, Emental and Physical Cards. The only exception to this is the addition of the two jokers. The Higher Emotional Center is represented by the red exrtra joker, and the Higher Mental Center is represented by the black regular joker. Take some time to look over the whole diagram. You can see that our Higher Emotional Center is composed completely of our Born Center, Learned Center, and Emotional Center. This is why if the lower centers are not working properly the higher centers will not function. You could picture our current state by imagining that the kings were almost completely removed. This will, of course, be different for various people. Professional athletes and musicians for example will have more development of the king of clubs. The jacks will be tattered and ugly from overuse. The queens will function to some extent, but will be severely under developed. Also notice that the higher centers have the same structure as the lower ones. The three diamonds correspond to the jacks in the lower centers, the three clubs correspond to the queens in the lower centers, and the three hearts correspond to the kings in the lower centers. Our Born, Learned, and Emotional centers in the Higher Emotional center are supposed to have the same 8, 10, 12 relationship in the same way that the jack, queen, and king have in the lower centers. The three acecs, diamonds, clubs, and spades represent the three lower centers as a whole, and the red extra joker represents the Higher Emotional Center as a whole.

The Higher Emotional Center is supposed to be the seat of concience. This is a feature that evolved as a survival mechanism. different species of heard animals survive by putting the welfare of the group ahead of the welfare af any particular member. If our Higher Emotional Centers were working properly, we would always want to help others in whatever ways and as much as we can. It should be obvious when we look at ourselves and others that this part does not manifest very much or well in the world. Imagine if we could, individually and as a species, lift ourselves up to the levels of cows or goats? Perhaps our species would have a much smaller chance of killing ourselves off through nuclear or conventional wars, hunger, malnutrition, meanness and neglect? Another aspect of the Higher Emotional Center is its speed. It is much faster than the lower centers. If it were going at 30,000 times the speed of the Born and Learned centers, maybe its operation would look simultaneous to our slow lower centers. The Higher Emotional Center is also the seat of understanding. As we fix and tune our lower centers, we will understand many wonderful things. This type of understanding always has an element of positive emotion to it. Positive emotions are the only ones that can exist in the Higher Emotional Center. They do not flip-flop the way emotions do in the Emotional Center, and they have a distinctive flavor, which we will eventually come to experience, and learn to cherish. The Higher Emotional Center also takes the position of the queen in the Higher Mental Center.

The Higher Mental center is the seat of Reason. It starts off with the perfected Intellectual Center as its lowest part, which corresponds to the jack. The middle part, which corresponds to the queen, is the perfected Higher Emotional Center. The top part, which corresponds to the king, is made up of the whole of the Intellectual Center, Higher Emotional Center, and the Higher Mental Center itself. The Higher Mental center is faster still than the Higher Emotional center. It can connect us instantaneously to all the proper knowledge (jack of spades - automatic attention), for the current situation (queen of spades attention drawn by an outside event), and process it all correctly (king of spades intentionally directed attention). It does this so fast that it appears that we make the perfect response without any thought at all. It is fortunate that we don't really have to do anything in the Higher Mental Center, because it is too far away from us in our present state for us to understand very much about it. As we clean up our four lower centers, and start getting the Higher Emotional Center working, the Higher Mental Center will eventually start forming and functioning. It is very important to remember that this center is very far from us in our present state. Being the egotistical creatures we are, it is very easy to fall into the trap of thinking we have already arrived. When this happens our progress along our spiritual path will stop, because why would anyone play Games designed to give us what we think we already have? It is necessary to become VERY familiar with these card diagrams. One way to do this is to start using the cards in our interactions with others. For example, we could say “When that guy cut me off in traffic my jack and queen of hearts immediately activated, producing some very unseemly emotional manifestations.” When two or more people come together to help each other with the Games (A manifestation of Higher Emotional Center, by the way :-)) what they can accomplish together is a lot more than the sum of what they could accomplish alone. This is probably some kind of an exponential thing.

All that being said, here is an example of a possible manifestation of Higher Mental center. 25 dollar per game pool.

Aces Diagram

Man as a four story being

Blessed Orb that rules the night,
Adds the colors to our sight!
Red is blue and black is red...
it will show what is right,
and what is an illusion!

Chapter 6

Transformation

The energy expended in active inner work is immediately transformed into new energy; that expended in passive work is lost forever. Whatever you gain through said active inner (spiritual) work can never be lost, it is yours forever. That which is gained through passive work doesn't exist; strangely, and somewhat paradoxically, this makes it extremely difficult to disencumber from oneself.

Think what you feel and feel what you think. Fusion of the two produces another force.

One of the best means for arousing the desire to excel at the games is to realize that you may die at any moment... But first you must learn how to keep it in mind.

In these Games transformation is probably the most important single concept. This primarily refers to transforming negative emotions into positive emotions. So what do you mean, we are supposed to change sadness into happiness, fear into calm, hate into love et cetera? Well, not exactly. All of these, and many more, are what we call pleasant and unpleasant emotions and if you observe yourself and others for a while you will see that this flip flopping is our normal, mechanical state, and exactly that from which we need to escape! These "normal" emotions all exist only on the Physical and Mental levels. What we are aiming to produce through transformation is positive emotions, which can only exist on the spiritual level. We have to start out with the negative emotions because they are the only ones with enough force to drive us to higher levels. By constantly expressing and indulging in these negative emotions, we are letting the force we need for our inner (spiritual) journey leak away and dissipate. In order to have the force to create the positive emotions which will drive the growth of our Higher Emotional center, we must observe our negative emotions, avoid expressing them, and use all of our wit and cunning to go against them.

So let's start out by looking at the Emental Level on the cards diagram. The aces represent the center as a whole, and the jack, queen, and king are the three parts of each center. Each center has its own memory, associations, and will, which correspond to the jack, queen, and king respectively. The parts of the centers can also be recognized by the type of attention involved in its operation. The jack needs no attention, it functions automatically. The queen uses what is called drawn attention, that is, the attention is drawn by some outside object. The king represents directed attention, or will, which always requires an intentional effort on our part. We don't use the kings very much, and they are key to transformation. The jack and queen alone will leave us flip flopping as we always do, it takes no effort to let our jacks merrily (or more often sadly and bitterly) go their way, while whatever external events are around us cause our attention to go hither, thither, and yon! It is only by using the will, represented by the king, and also known as effort, to go against our negative emotions that we can drive our inner (spiritual) journey forward.

Since the aces are made up of the jack, queen, and king of the suit, we will examine only the three cards, the jacks through kings, in each center. The jack of hearts is responsible for emotional memories. We all have plenty of these which can be pulled up at any time by anything which happens to pass into our lives. We can also recognize the jack by seeing how our emotions flit around here and there all by themselves, as when daydreaming or just sitting quietly. The queen is a little more complex. Whenever anything comes into our attention, we will immediately have some kind of emotions about it. We like this, we don't like that, we are afraid of this, but that makes us feel safe, we are bored by this, excited by that, angered by this, enamoured by that. This shows the action of the queen of hearts in the sense of it being drawn attention, i.e. drawn by an outside object, and also in terms of its property of associations. Whatever comes within our perception, we have an immediate and automatic response to it. The jack and queen of hearts can only act mechanically, that is without any will or effort. So what would the king of hearts entail? It would mean that we had used will, or effort, to produce whatever emotion we wanted to. Everyone has a little of this, i.e. can you act happy around your boss, or an important business contact? Most of us are probably not really so good at this, often being quite transparent to those we are trying to fool. For others, this type of business behavior is well ensconced in the queen of hearts, so there is no effort involved. Some great actors probably also have a bit of the king of hearts, but in everyday life they may not do any better than the rest of us. For the most part our emotional centers are out of our control, like a rouge elephant dashing here and there breaking and hurting things, mostly ourselves. So we must find a couple of elephants we can control better, and get them onto the job!

The first tame elephant at our disposal is the Intellectual center. The jack, once again, has to do with memory and works automatically. This, in itself, is not a bad thing. The job of the jack is to take in impressions, keep track of them, and send them out to the appropriate place when needed. The jack of spades should not only be sending the appropriate memories and incoming impressions to the queen and king of spades, but to the other centers also as it is appropriate to do so. The jack of spades should never respond for us, but this is pretty much all that ever happens. This is quite easy to observe in ourselves and others. One characteristic of the jack of spades is that it can only count up to two. This is binary thinking and it is easy to see all around us. (Look on any social media!) This binary thinking is a prerequisite for all kinds of negative emotions. Note that when someone says that there is only one way to look at something, or one thing to do, he really means that there are two, and yours is wrong. This is the main idea behind the many ends of the stick Game. If you give the jack of spades more than two things at once, it may start working more normally, and stop shouting the same thing over and over. Of course the jack of spades is almost always in cahoots with the Queen of spades, which is in charge of all the myriad associations between what the jack of spades has collected and is collecting. The Queen of spades is drawn to whatever impressions are around us. Some impressions will tend to lift us up, and others will tend to bring us to our lowest levels. It would behoove us all to ponder this VERY, VERY carefully, for it is one area in our lives where we can have a significant amount of control. Do you want to go watch a horror movie, or study and contemplate the Games diagrams?

Our primary aim is to transform negative emotions. The basic technique for doing this is to use intentional effort to change them at any given moment. First, we have to notice that we have negative emotions, and realize that they are bad and need to go away. How many times have you seen someone say “I’m not angry!” very angrily. This is an indication of what is called a buffer, which keeps us from seeing unpleasant things about ourselves. A person with such a buffer can run around all day being angry and snapping at people and sincerely believe that they do not get angry. One very effective method for finding and seeing buffers in ourselves, is to look at which manifestations of others really bug the heck out of us. The limits of our ability to endure the manifestations of others will show us very important things about ourselves, i.e. they may point the way towards our buffers. It is very important to have others around us for the Games, and this is one example of why this is so important and useful. Others can show us today what it might take years or decades for us to figure out on our own, and life is short, so there are certainly many things that we just would never have time to get to on our own. Once you start to glimpse the incredible wonder and limitless heights possible on your inner (Spiritual) walkabout, it may give you a proverbial kick to get you off the proverbial ground.

There was once a young man who encountered these ideas in his early twenties and was immediately enamored of them. He was a very angry young man, and it was easy for him to immediately see this. He was also immediately amazed that here was a completely brand new idea, i. e. that negative emotions like anger were bad and needed to be gotten rid of. However, it never occurred to him that he was a mean person, and if you would have asked him if he was, he would have denied it. So, this angry young man, with the help of some very dear and intelligent friends, worked literally for decades trying to go against his anger, and bit by bit he made a good bit of progress. Then, at a certain point in time when he was already an old man, he finally progressed enough to see his meanness, and one day it pretty much all came barrelling down on him all at once. This is an example of God, or Higher Centers, or Nature not letting us see things about ourselves until we are ready to see them. So what happened to the guy? Well, due to the efforts this man had made against his anger, and many other similar efforts, he was not horrified, shocked, or even particularly surprised. He kind of felt, oh, I wonder why I never saw that before, while at the same time knowing full well why he had not. And with all his prior efforts it did not need decades to deal with these new revelations, but he continues progressing, seeing and transforming things every day! The angry young man had always hated mean people intensely. Once you see something in yourself, and rest assured, you have everything in yourself, you will easily see it in others, and also easily endure others' manifestations of said something.

You may be asking, so if the angry young man saw the meanness in others, and so did the much less angry old man, then what's the difference, didn't they both see the same things? Here is a very wonderful thing to know and understand. The angry young man saw people's meanness through the lens of the Emental Level, which has things like self pride, vanity, anger, negative emotional judgement, fear, negative imagination, and many other things unbecoming a human being all mixed up in things. The much less angry old man saw it much more through the lens of the higher centers, where all of these things cannot exist. On the Emental Level, you get a very binary, and rough tasting approximation of a situation. Through the lens of higher centers, you see many different truths on many different levels, and you see it all at once. It is a much different taste, and it does not evoke any negative emotions in the person experiencing it. Like all things spiritual (inner) this is not a yes or no thing, but a process that starts when you start cleaning and fixing up your inner machine. As you progress, you will be able to start to tell the difference between things coming from higher and lower places in yourself, and it will help guide you on your journey.

It is also worth noting that while the old man had indeed made quite a bit of progress, he still has plenty of inexactitudes left on his Emental Level to keep him busy, day to day, for the rest of his lifetime.

The second tame elephant is our body, and everyone has a certain amount of control over it. Our body is represented by two centers on the lower story, the born and learned centers. They are so named because these name remind us how to properly see the different functions in our bodies. Our five senses are things that everyone is born with, as are our basic bodily functions such as digestion, growth, and regeneration. On the Learned side, we can walk, run, ride a bicycle, play football, etc, all the things we have learned to do with our bodies throughout our lives. There is also much that can potentially be gained by learning new physical activities while looking at the process through the knowledge of the Games and Game diagrams. We can put in useful efforts here through improving diet and exercise, and every effort made with the intention of helping us along our spiritual (inner) journey, will be a manifestation of one or both kings on the physical level, either that of diamonds, clubs, or both! Several of the Games include efforts to make us aware of and give us control of our bodies. When the rogue elephant that is our emotional center is lashing out and overpowering our intellectual center, we may be able to bring in the body to tip the balance.

At this point we can summarize some ideas about our inner odyssey. In order to commence and propel us along our amazing personal path, we need will, or effort from all of the four lower centers, which is represented by the four kings, diamonds for Born, clubs for Learned, hearts for Emotional, and spades for Intellectual. The centers are all interconnected in myriad ways, much being good and useful, and so things that we want to strengthen, clean up, and encourage to grow. Most of our problems are centered around negative emotions, and many things especially in the Intellectual center, but also in the Learned and Born centers, which contain many bad habits, and damage from whatever we have been through in our lives. One ally that is much more than we realize is our attention. Each center has its own attention, and we can learn to use the different attentions we have to learn about our machines, and even start to raise our attentions towards higher levels, spiritual levels where our true home awaits our return!

Emotional fear vs Born fear

Fear in the Emotional Center is mostly a very bad thing, which causes all kinds of Emotional problems. It is possible to learn to discern these two kinds of fear and maybe some examples need to go here? cross the road at any time without looking. A. You speak about instinctive fear; emotional fear is different, it is based on imagination.

All our life, all our habitual ways of thinking, have only one aim—to avoid shocks, unpleasant feelings, unpleasant realizations about ourselves.

Curiosity is a special emotion which exists in each centre. In the intellectual centre it is connected with desire to know.

But this refers only to intellectual attitudes. In emotional centre, negative emotional attitudes mean identifying.

trying not to identify is the best means of passing into higher parts of centres.

Negative emotions, can be either pleasant or unpleasant, and this can be very different from person to person, and can even change for a certain person according to the situation.

fear anger bored meanness guilt feeling sorry for yourself(internal considering vs external considering) greediness unhappy dissatisfied dislike pity

Chapter 7

Games

7.1 The Basic Games

Oot/Oat

The main focus of these Games is to change and improve ourselves. To that end learning to observe ourselves is paramount. The Oot/Oat game is two games for the price of one. Can it get any better than that? Oot is Observe, Oppose, Transform and Oat is Observe, Amplify, Transform. We start out with Oot because most of our time and energy is spent on useless, imaginary, harmful negative emotions. Seeing them, not expressing them, and opposing them has to be at the forefront at all times. We can observe ourselves in the past, present, and future. Of the three, the present is quite the most difficult. We can start out looking at the past, what we have done and how we have treated others during our lifetime. This is the Moral Inventory from the twelve step programs. By becoming familiar with what we have done in the past, we can have a good idea of how we will react in the future. Our mechanical negative Emental Manifestations are reactions to external events, the queens of the centers are very predictable and this can help us know how we will react in the future. If we know that someone is going to do something that annoys us, we can prepare ourselves and try not to react, both on the inside and the outside.

One of the most important features of our observation is impartiality. We need to learn to see things in ourselves without having a negative emotional judgement about it, i.e. We don't want to bring up more negative emotions because of the ones we previously manifested. This just perpetuates the normal mechanical flow of all this stuff. We can practice sepatating thoughts from emotions. Learn to observe the Intellectual center apart from the Emotional center. At the same time, we must learn to make honest mental asessments of what we have seen. When we manifest badly we need to recognize that fact, and be willing and able to apologize when appropriate. One useful thing we can do is to avoid putting labels on things and just see them for what they are. Human beings are composed of a tangled, complicated tapestry of different motivations and urges, and knowing and seeing this can help keep us out of the trap of yes and no thinking, which is a necessaty prerequisite for all these negative emotions.

Another thing we can do along these lines is to ponder the fact that our behavior is not limited to just one or two different options. Remember that the jack and queen of spades can't count over two, so if you come up with three options in any scenario it can help to get you out of that kind of black and white thinking. Sometimes it just comes down to brute force. If you're sitting in your car day after day trying not to be angry at your family because they tried to kill you, knowing that these negative emotions need to go, to be transformed, refusing to give into them and praying mightily for those who have wronged you, even though you know you are doing it for your sake much more than theirs, at some point the dawn breaks, the sky opens up, and you start to see the light of dawn.

Another interesting line of observation of oneself is in relation to object-ing. We object to all kinds of things, and in this context objecting means an automatic, mechanical negative Emental response to any particular thing we encounter in life. Let's postulate that a highly spititually advanced (remember that spiritual means inner) human should be able to do anything he or she wants, depending on the situation, and what is best for themselves, the other people involved, and everyone in the world. To be able to metaphorically walk on water, so to speak, to rise above the raging storms of daily life. Let's also ponder the idea that a suficiently advanced human being might reach a point where these so-called contradictions started to fade, blur, and vanish into thin air. If you look at the things we object to in life we will see that a lot of the time, probalby almost all the time, it really doesn't matter, in which case we may as well just go along with the other person. Looking carefully at all the things we object to, and on the flip side how much we demand from others, and how unimportant these things really are, can help make a lot of illusory stuff start to fade away and dissappear.

There is nothing in us that is just exactly perfect, so while most of what we are pretty much needs to get thrown out, there is stuff in there that needs to stay and even be encouraged to grow. One such area is financial responsibility. Most people live from paycheck to paycheck, mortgaged to the hilt, barely able to make their monthly payments, and with nothing saved for a rainy day. Everyone should have at least six month's expenses saved and actually probably several times that much. If we look at financial responsibility as something that can be nurtured, or amplified, (The A in Oat) then this becomes a useful and interesting game. This will be seen to be tied in with all kinds of negative emotions, pride, vanity, and self-love especially. But we do have some good habits in there too, we have a place to live and we eat. But these good parts of ourselves need to be amplified a bit, until they function well enough to get us to a more secure financial situation. There are plenty of good things in all of us that could be polished up, nurtured, cared for, and amplified. It is important to look at all parts of ourselves as impartially as possible, get rid of that which is useless or harmful, and fix up and repair that which is useful.

Harnel-miaznel blending

red words game

Every time you gain a little knowledge and understanding your ability to love and appreciate progress on your inner path will increase.

The higher (understanding) blends with the lower (knowledge) in order to actualize the middle (king of hearts) and thus becomes either higher (king of hearts) for the preceeding lower (knowledge) or lower (king of hearts) for the succeeding higher (understanding).

Self hypnosis games

In the Games we have to formulate correct aims and then figure out how to persue them. We are trying to move from the Emental Level to the Spiritual Level, or in other words to clean up and fix our four lower levels so that our Spiritual Level will functions properly. Proper aims can be long or short range, and it is important to look at long range aims sometimes. We might, for example, say that someday we will be in complete control of our emotions. This is a good and valid aim, but a vey distant one. whatever you imagine it would look like or entail being, by the time you get there things will look a lot different. Perhaps so much different that you wouldn't even use those words to express it. Aims that are closer and more specific are generally a lot more usefull. Examples here.

reminding factors

7.2 Intellectual Games

Emotional Power Moments Game

What is this game doing in the Intellectual Games section? Shouldn't it be in the Emotional Games section? That is a very good question with a very important answer. This Game is in the Intellectual Games section because it involves memorizing a list of things, which is a very important way to improve your Intellectual center.

many ends of the stick

Related Associations Game from chapter 2 vvov.

memorize game

7.3 Emotional Games

Related Associations Game from chapter 2 vvov.

Taking the Blame

This is a very good and useful game to play, especially if you are playing in with others who know about and understand it. In this scenario it can be quite hilarious. There are also potential pitfalls to this game, so tread with caution. You have to make sure that you are not saying things that are going to upset others. This is not nice, and we don't do it except in situations where the other person knows what is going on and has agreed to it. Even if this is the case you still need to use much caution. If your wife, husband, children, or other family or friends are around, if you offend them too much, even though they agreed to the game, you may be very, very sorry. We are trying to play Games that will be useful and fun for all involved, and it is useful to push people a certain amount sometimes. To repeat, when there are people involved that you care about, and would not like to be separated from, be very, very, careful. Along those same lines, here in the latter part of the second decade of the twenty first century, you need to be very careful about legal liability, both civil and criminal. If you are living in the USA at this time, then you know about the potential risks. If you are from somewhere different, a little research into the legal shenanigans of this time may be interesting.

As its name indicates, this game is about taking the blame and how this can benefit all involved, save countless hours, days, weeks, years, and decades of senseless fussing and fighting. Rather than spending the evening arguing with, ignoring, and pouting at one another, wouldn't it be nice to get it over with quickly and play a game that is much more fun and useful? So, let's say you have a situation where someone's cookie is gone, and they say "Who ate my cookie?" and you immediately reply "I did!" Well, this is going to pretty much take the wind out of the sails of the argument, and as long as you reply calmly and reasonably, it will disappear pretty soon. Notice that by simply taking the blame you have freed both yourself and the other person from a whole pile of bad smelling do-do. Now, let's look at another scenario where another person is involved, the one who actually ate the cookie. When the one who actually ate the cookie hears your confession, they will probably be very surprised and relieved. Between you and the accuser, things are largely the same, but since there is another person present, the accuser will probably be a lot less likely to make a fuss about it. In this case all three of you have been freed from whatever amount of silliness would have otherwise ensued.

7.4 Learned Games

mechanical movement

7.5 Born Games

Pay attention to your breath while you eat game.

Pay attention to every part of breath in every bite of every meal. Bites include drinks too.

This is one of the most important games. It offers a unique opportunity to bring in the second elephant to help reign in the rogue elephant which are the jack and queen of hearts. The diamonds represent what we are born with, and eating is probably the most basic bodily function over which we have some control. Remember that control, when used with the intent to guide you along your own, personal, inner (spiritual) path is a manifestation of the king of the center, in this case the king of diamonds. The king of spades, which you are exercising right now by learning, studying, and practicing these Games, helps the diamonds and clubs to reign in the jack and queen of hearts. We have been eating since no more than a few days after our births, so it is easy to imagine that this might be a very strong part of ourselves. There is a very interesting and powerful form of identification involved in eating, which can sometimes be observed if you see someone eating without practicing table manners. When you see this you will be reminded of a wolf devouring its prey, and it is ugly, primal, and a bit scary. At some point you will be able to learn to see this in yourself, but you will most likely have to practice this game for a while before being able to do so. It might also be possible to see this clearly if you take videos of yourself eating when you are alone and very hungry.

It is also not so easy for some people to actually do this Game. There was once an hour long meeting of a group of “spiritual Masters” who sat around for the whole hour commiserating about how hard this Game was. Not one of them had actually ever been able to remember to try it. If you are in this category then there is probably no hope for you whatsoever, and you may as well just give up on the Games without going any further. There is no point in having someone who is so weak that they can not even start to practice this simple game go forward. There is no path open to them. On the other hand, its going to take a lot of effort and perseverance to follow and progress on your journey, so this is a perfect place to make a stand, and do whatever it takes to get into this very good pattern of behavior. One very good way to do this could be to use reminding factors. For example, switch your watch to the other hand, so that when you look at the watchless hand to see if its lunch time, it reminds you that you need to remember to pay attention to your breath when eating. Perhaps you could buy yourself a new piece of jewelry just for this purpose, whenever you see the item, you try to remember this Game. Or maybe with WATCH BREATH on the front or back of your hand. Or maybe you could bring in the first tame elephant, the king of spades. Make up a poem called Watch My Breath, neither too short nor too long, and memorize it. Your lunch break is the perfect time to play at memorization, and if your poem is about watching your breath, it seems likely that you may be able to actually do it during lunch. Now here is one that only the women, who generally have better developed jacks and queens of hearts, can try: bring in an emotional element to the poem, make it about a magical unicorn, frolicing fairies, or a beautiful butterfly, and then share it with some men, they can probably catch up eventually!

Once you actually get started with this Game, there is a lot more there to see and do than one might imagine. First of all, can you actually perform the game according to the basic rule: Pay attention to every part of breath in every bite of every meal. This means inhale and exhale. Its best to start of when you are alone. Move to an empty table, go to a secluded place, or an empty room to eat. In the beginning it will probably be impossible to play this game while in the company of others, unless they are also playing the Games, which is the best situation of all! What about eating different things? A piece of hard candy (NO BITING) will take a whole lot of breaths. If you are eating a piece of meat which needs chewing, probably a few breaths. Drinking a mouthful of water? Seems like one or two, depending on whether you count in and out as one cycle or two breaths. It is important to note that you should never try to change your breathing, because it could cause permanent damage. Your jack and queen of diamonds, your body, knows how much you need to breathe in any given situation. Let it do its job, you can't do it properly, and you certainly don't want to have to. It is also good to bring in the other centers here. You can observe with the jack and queen of spades how various foods affect your tummy. Most of the food you eat will have a bad effect on you, and when you notice this you can, if you remember, eat something else next time. Of course the jack and queen of hearts are always good to invite to the party. Did you know that around a third (33%) of the world's population suffers from hunger? That should be enough to make even the jack and queen of hearts challenged men feel a little grateful while they are scarfing down their vending machine tuna salad sandwiches! Actually, and pleasant emotion (Emotional Level) which has the potential to be transformed into a positive emotion (Spiritual Level) will work, and the stronger the pleasant emotion the better. Remember also that in the Games rewards are not always immediate. Sustained efforts, which represent the kings of the centers, repeated over time will kind of build up, leading to really wondrous revelations in the future. This also relates to the idea of "Like what it does not like." If at any moment we do what the machine is accustomed and likes to do, it is the jack and queen of the center, the energy used is lost forever, and we remain stuck in our normal mood swings. However, if we intentionally go against all this normal stuff, the machine will be uncomfortable, it wants to keep everything as it is. By exercising and practicing the kings of the center, we can save energy, a little here and a little there, and eventually get the Higher Emotional center to start working. This is where we can start to glimpse positive emotions, which always come with increased understanding, more and more finely tuned knowledge, and a drawing closer to whatever conception of God you currently have. You can only really know, understand, and get closer to God on the Spiritual Level, and you will be amazed at the things you will encounter on your own, personal, inner (spiritual) journey!

lying still

7.6 Sexual Energy Games

I know why I don't go to extremes extremes game gurdjieff abuse and use of sex

7.7 Miscellaneous Games

Continuous Input Game

During prehistoric times our survival depended on our whole machine being tuned to perfection. We had to constantly pay attention to the input coming from outside or we would literally be dead. Man has shaped the earth since prehistoric times in various ways, and we constantly try to make it safer for ourselves and our children. It is ironic that the very act of making the world safer has and invariably must always cause a degradation in the functioning of the human machine. If we look at the Spiritual Level cards diagram, specifically the Higher Emotional center, we can start to glimpse how and why this will happen. The Higher Emotional center, as a whole, is represented by the red Extra Joker. It consists of the three lower centers which are represented by the ace of diamonds, for the Born center, the ace of clubs, for the learned center, and the ace of hearts for the Emotional center. These aces are in turn divided into parts represented by the jack of diamonds, queen of diamonds, and king of diamonds for the Born center; the jack of clubs, queen of clubs, and King of clubs for the Learned center; and the jack of hearts, queen of hearts, and king of hearts for the emotional center. These three centers correspond to the parts of the lower centers represented by the jacks, queens, and kings, the ace of diamonds represents the lowest, or mechanical attention part of the Higher Emotional center, the ace of clubs represents the middle, or drawn attention part of the Higher Emotional center, and the ace of hearts represents the highest, or directed attention part of the Higher emotional center. Animals have jack and queen, but can not develop king which is whole developed Emotional center. As we make the world safer for our children they stop developing on the physical level, so the Higher Emotional center is no longer awakened as it is in wild animals.

In our relationships with other humans, the Higher Emotional center is associated with helping our fellow human beings, understanding them. In the pursuit of our spiritual (inner) destiny, path, or journey we can make little or no progress without the ability to help others. (This is related to having no more spiritual teachers.) When we gather together with the intention of helping each other, the knowledge needed to do so, and a love in our hearts for God and our fellow beings, a sort of magic arises which can be much greater than the sum of its parts. (Us, that is.) This is the Higher Emotional center directed outward towards the world. The main focus of the Games, of course is internal (spiritual.) In relation to our inner world, the Higher Emotional center is responsible for understanding all of the inner (spiritual) knowledge contained in the Games. We can think of it as a group of beings inside of ourselves, (The Amanon and their allies from lower centers.) Who are combining this knowledge with the understanding which comes from the Higher Emotional center, throwing in a healthy dose of love and thankfulness to God, and mixing the whole thing up (practice, harnel-miaznel) until it makes a fine dough that can be cooked into heavenly bread!

Let's start out with a scenario from pre history. Some people lived in a cave, and had to go to get food from some fruit trees, which grew some distance away. When they got up in the morning they had to pay attention to every input from every sense (Born center) in order to safely leave the cave without getting eaten by wolves. On the way to the fruit grove they had to, use all their physical prowess in addition to paying attention to their senses. These were attributes on the learned side of the Physical Level There would be no time for fussing and fighting because those acting so foolishly would also get eaten by the wild animals. Life was hard and those who were not up to par were quickly culled from the herd. Now skip a few generations to the same cave where the descendants of these people are living. The discarded pits from the fruit have sprouted up so the people don't have to travel for food. They have built fences to keep out the wild animals, and have killed off most of the wolves. When one of the kids asks their sibling to get a piece of fruit for them, they retort "Get up and get it your self."

Now let's skip to middle part of the last century, before cell phones and other computers were commonly available. We had telephones, but you had to actually remember phone numbers, everyone knew a few of them. If you wanted to hear music, you had to listen to a radio or tv or go to see it live. It would have been considered very impolite to turn on the tv or radio and ignore a guest in your house, and even when walking down the street with someone a certain level of attention was expected.

Survival of the fittest in the Born center causes evolution of species over time periods that are not relevant to individual humans, or even societies of humans. In the Learned, Emotional, and Intellectual centers defects can easily have a crushing effect on societies that is not only possible, but not that difficult for an individual human to observe.

Note that this is equally true on the Physical and Emental Levels. Those with severe defects would not survive long. This applies to both Learned behavior and Born behavior.

Now let's fast forward to today. People have some kind of electronic input almost constantly, from the moment we awaken until we go to sleep, how long do you actually go without looking at some kind of computer, whether it be handheld or larger, listening to some electronic input, music, podcasts, tv, etc? We are constaltly under the influence of these devices, and they even interrupt one another. Ever get a phone call in the middle of your favorite tv show or podcast? And this is having malficient effects on human beings on all three levels, Physical, Emental, and Spiritual. On the physical level we are dying left and right from heart disease, cancer, accidents (unintentional injuries), stroke, and chronic lower respiratory diseases. A huge percentage of these deaths are preventable. On the Emental Level the main problem is negative emotions. If you look around in the world it is easy to see constant manifestations of fear, anger, meanness etc. Seeing these things inside of yourself is a good deal more difficult, but a necessary precursor should you desire to be able to help yourself or anyone else. These electronic devices exacerbate the expression and arising of these negative emotions in many ways. When we are in contact with other people through electronic mediums, it is a lot easier to be mean and masty than it is face to face. The main way that negative emotions are learned and spread is by copying or mimicing other people. With the huge proloferation of this sort of behavior via electronic mediums, the whole problem is exacerbated on a level unprecedented in human history. Man has never had a lot of manifrstations on the spiritual level in ordinary life. Whatever rudimentary examples exist are going to involve helping others. If you imagine the change from our fictional cave dweller telling his sister to get her own fruit to today, do you think it would be fair to say that we have made a lot of progress? Perhaps modern man has not really advanced so much from cave dwellers. Maybe we haven't advanced at all.

We need to pry ourselves away from our edlectronic devices as much as possible. This is probably going to be a lot easier for older people than the younger ones, who have never known life without them. Perhaps it can be broken down into smaller chunks. How long do you have your ear buds or headset on/functioning each day? How can you reduce this? Are you willing and able to reduce the amount of time that you listen to music each day? Remember that none of these tasks has intrinsic value, you are not going to enter the kingdom of heaven by throwing out your walkman, or turning off your music account. It is, however, very useful to look at your mechanical/mental responses to these ideas. This would be the jacks and queens of hearts and spades. Can you see anything that could be attributed to the spades, or in other words thoughts, or intellectual activity as opposed to emotional reactions? Can you separate the jacks from the queens at all? What about your phone. Can you go for some period of time without taking phone calls? How long, an hour, a day, a week, a month, a year, forever? What thoughts and emotions arise in relation to these ideas? What about navigation, those of us who are older remember having to get directions every time we wanted to go somewhere new, whether it was in town or across the country, or world.

There was once an old man who decided to stop using his cell phone as much as possible. He made it a point to learn how to go to the places to which he was accustomed. It was winter time, albeit a very mild winter in a southern latitude, so he put an extra jacket and sweater in his car and sent off. When he got to the restaurant they were out of the only food they had on the menu that he could eat without having serious health repercussions, so he decided to get directions to the other location and drive over there. He got directions from one of the drivers and was chatting with the employees when one of them, a young girl in her mid twenties, realized that he was walking and driving around without a cell phone. She was aghast! How can you do that? What if your car breaks down? You might die in the cold! Well, the cold that particular night was well above freezing, and the man had a little extra clothing just in case. He explained to the girl that he had been trained in survival in the military, and that a human being could live for three or four days without water, and a month or three without food if they could get water. It is also interesting to note that these days almost everyone has a cell phone, so your chances of having to actually walk anywhere are close to zero. This is a very good example of several of the almost entirely imaginary fears that rule our day to day lives. Once you see them in yourself, you will be able to see them a lot better, more accurately, and in more detail in others!

While these cell phones are overall a great bane both to society in general and also to those who have the misfortune of being in possession of them, they can also be useful and helpful. The timer can be of very much help to us in these Games. One of the main problems we have is that we can't remember to do things. After you start to understand that you are not what you have the right to be, (You have the right not to be negative.) and that these Games can help you to advance on your spiritual (inner) path, you may decide that you would like to put this into practice. Then you will discover that there are some more problems that will make this more difficult than it at first seemed. The timer on your cell phone is one way to circumvent some of these problems. First, take three games, say Oot Game, One to Ten Game, and I Am game. Set your timer for a certain time, this is a more the merrier situation. You can experiment with different time frames according to whatever is going on in your life at the moment. Remember, we want to be smart and cunning here, not do stupid stuff that's going to cause trouble, strife, or hate and discontent! At the right time and under the right circumstances you could bring the time intervals down to a few minutes or maybe even less. Whenever the timer goes off, practice one of the Games and rotate them so that all get practiced. As you progress you will certainly add more games to your list, and remove them too, as you learn to push yourself ever faster and faster and better and better down your personal spiritual (inner) path. If a random timer, by which is meant one that automatically resets itself to a random value within a range after it goes off, it is quite easy to program one. This could lead to a very interesting game that could be played alone or with others. Set the timer to a relatively short value range, and play one Game until the timer goes off, then start the next game. With multiple players, each could play the same game or they could each play different games each time the timer goes off. A more advanced program could take the games as input, and assign them to the players at random.

At some point you are going to have to confront time management issues; you will not get very far in the Games if you do not devote a lot of time to it. After you have everything satisfying and really necessary for your planetary body, you will need to develop a constant, instinctive need for self perfection in the sense of being, or in other words, you need to make progressing along your inner (spiritual) path your number one priority. The best way to do this is to practice, practice, practice! All of the various electronic devices will, for many of us, be the main thing occupying our time. For those who have not yet come to that point, it will be very beneficial to keep this idea in mind as you start to use these devices. There are many modern methods for moderating and limiting the usage of various devices, and we should list some of them here after appropriate research and verification. Once we have looked at this a bit, we will be able to separate usefull electronic activities from harmfull and wastefull ones. It should be very simple to incorporate this into all the websites, tools, and Games involved, and produce firm, useful, and verifiable reccomendations for various situations. There is no need to go to extremes here just start out with some small aim and see how it works out. Try spending an hour or two less screen time each day, or whatever amount seems good. Try spending part of your day without any electronic inpit. Perhaps your drive to and from work, or a part thereof. Spend this time playing one or more Games. You could also find ways to use your electronics devices to your advantage. Try putting the diagrams on them, and rather than listening to music during this time, contemplate the diagrams and try to find things in yourself that they illustrate. How about the queen of diamonds, that pizza smells good, right? That's the queen of diamonds, and if youturned your head to look at the sign on the store, that would be the queen of clubs.

accidents (unintentional injuries), break this down somewhere else and others too and there are even various measures available to help with this problem.

The idea of evolution by means of survival of the fittest over huge time spans applies to genetics and the evolution of species and is driven by culling of the herd through Born functions. On the learned side, this process can take place on a much smaller time scale, even one that can easily be witnessed by a single human being.

What do I call identification (identifying) and how and where do I describe it?

binary thinking I never argue, buffers.

buffer game

7.8 Song Games

So, if one had a story to tell, which was actually an alegory, and wanted to tell it in a pop music style song, one could come up with several choruses, which conveyed the central, most important ideas/concepts, and then lead the listener through the story by presenting the verses in a progression, perhaps through time, perhaps even through dimensions above time, and put real, understandable examples in the verses, and then put the choruses in as appropriate to emphasize a point in a verse, transition to the next verse, or point out a fallacy in a verse.

Think of it like a plot twist in a story: the chorus is your thesis, the verses are the examples, and the bridge is the “aha moment” that makes everything click.

Go to Extremes Parody

[Verse 1] Call me a joker, call me a fool Right at this moment I’m totally cool

Clear as a crystal, sharp as a knife I feel like I’m in the prime of my life
Sometimes it feels like I’m going too fast I don’t know how long This feeling will last

Maybe it’s only tonight

Call me a joker, call me a sinner make sure you never call me late for dinner

Everyone yearns for happy endings. We need to learn to find happy beginnings. And they are more and better than you can imagine!!!

[Chorus 1]

Darling I know I should not go to extremes Too high or too low I must stay in between And while I stand fall and play the middle’s where I need to stay Darling I know I should not go to extremes

[Verse 2] Sometimes I’m tired, sometimes I’m shot Sometimes I don’t know How much more I’ve got

Maybe I’m headed over the hill Maybe I’ve set myself up for the kill

Tell me how much Do you think you can take

Until the heart in you Is starting to break?

Sometimes it feels like it will

[Chorus 2] Darling, I don’t know Why I go to extremes Too high or too low

There ain’t no in-betweens

You can be sure when I’m gone I won’t be out there too long

Darling, I don’t know Why I go to extremes

Extremes take the edge off of your play Energy there makes your games go astray

Follow the path of your life embrace all the fun and the strife

Darling you must stay away from those extremes

[Verse 3] Out of the darkness, into the light Leaving the scene of the crime
 Either I'm wrong Or I'm perfectly right every time
 Sometimes I lie awake, night after night Coming apart at the seams
 Eager to please, ready to fight Why do I go to extremes?
 [Bridge] And if I stand or I fall It's all or nothing at all
 Darling, I don't know Why I go to extremes
 [Chorus 3] Oh, I don't know Why I go to extremes
 Too high or too low There ain't no in-betweens
 You can be sure when I'm gone I won't be out there too long
 Darling, I don't know Why I go to extremes
 [Outro] I don't know why, I don't know why I don't know why, I don't know why I don't know why, I don't know why Out of the dark, into the lights Whether I'm wrong, perfectly right I don't know why

I simply practiced what Gurdjieff suggested. Here, I won't list all my arsenals, but a few . . . to review ideas. I observe myself alone, I observe myself with others while keeping the face and the eyes alive as G advised; I observe my postures, my responses, my mechanicalness, etc. I keep vigilance for leaks; double-check for illusion; watch ego; flag internal considering; monitor thoughts, attitude, attention, and atmosphere, etc. Practice not doing as others do, taking the eight, taking the blame, listening – which is different than hearing. Remembering not to contribute to others' sleep, not to call a man a slug. Question if it is real I, or some little clever biased I in the driver's seat, question my accuracy. I experiment with influences using different tactics to see which works best, and, as Gurdjieff said, if one doesn't work, try the other

Laughter enters my Purgatory forever. Realizing the ludicrous situation of what I had become due to life circumstances and influences. . . that there really was no me. . . just remnants of poisoned impressions creating this glob of hypnotized, unaware, chemical robotic machinery that could not even think for itself, had no independence, and was buffered out in illusory perceptions. . . well, thanks to freedom, that simply made me laugh. I now laugh at all the parts I have not died to. Laughter dwells in my Purgatory

Chapter 8

Sayings

* Like what it does not like.

We must destroy our buffers. Children have none; therefore we must become like little children.

It is very useful to try to find what buffers are. Try to find how one lies to oneself with the help of buffers. Suppose one says 'I never argue'. Then, if one really has a good conviction that one never argues, one can argue as much as one likes and never notice it. This is the result of a buffer. If one has a certain number of good buffers, one is quite safe from unpleasant contradictions. Buffers are quite mechanical; a buffer is like a wooden thing, it does not adapt, but it plays its part very well: it prevents one seeing contradictions.

We attract forces according to our being.

One twentieth of all our energy goes to emotional and instinctive centres. Self-remembering is a lamp which must be kept alight by energy from these two centres. Our thinking centre is not really a centre, but an apparatus for collecting impressions.

We have good and bad angels. The good angels work by way of our voluntary, active nature and the bad through our passive nature. The Ahamkara are the good angles.

Mr. Self-love and Madame Vanity are the two chief agents of the devil.

Do not be affected by externals. In themselves they are harmless; it is we who allow ourselves to be hurt by them.

We never reach the limits of our strength.

If we do what we like doing, we are immediately rewarded by the pleasure of doing it. If we do what we don't like doing the reward must come later.

It is a mathematical law and all life is mathematics.

Men have their minds and women their feelings more highly developed. Either alone can give nothing. Think what you feel and feel what you think. Fusion of the two produces another force.

An ordinary man has no 'Master.' He is ruled now by the mind, now by the feelings and now by the body. Often the order comes from the automatic apparatus and still more often he is ordered about by the sex centre. Real will can only be when one 'I' rules, when there is a 'master' in the house.

You should forget about morality. Conversations about morality are simply empty talk. Your aim is inner morality.

To gain anything real, long practice is necessary. Try to accomplish very small things first.

To bear the manifestation of others is a big thing. The last thing for a man.

In the river of life suffering is not intentional. In conscious life suffering is intentional and of great value.

The highest that a man can attain is to master the Games.

The worse the conditions of life, the more productive the Games, as long as you learn, remember and play them.

Oot/Oat always and everywhere.

Remember that the Games are for struggling with yourself and only yourself... So thank everyone who gives you the opportunity.

Here we direct, create conditions, and help. Be sure to remember this and always treat others accordingly!

* Know that this house can be useful only to those who have recognized their nothingness and who believe in the possibility of changing.

If you already know it is bad and do it, you will not succeed very much in the Games.

The chief means of happiness in this life is the ability to always consider how to help others first and yourself second, until you advance far enough to realize that you don't have to choose.

* A true sign of a good man is if he loves his father and mother.

* Do not love art with your feelings.

* A true sign of a good man is if he loves his father and mother.

* Judge others by yourself and you will rarely be mistaken.

Help everyone who is playing the Games, or willing to.

* Respect every religion.

Respect those who put GREAT effort into the Games and make every effort to help them.

- * We can only strive to be able to be christians.
- * Don't judge a man by the tales of others.
- * Consider what people think of you, not what they say.
- * Take the understanding of the East and the knowledge of the West, and then seek.
- * Only he that can take care of what belongs to others may have his own.
- * Only conscious suffering has any sense.
- * It is better to be temporarily an egoist than never to be just.
- * Practice love first on animals, they are more sensitive.
- * By teaching others you will learn yourself.

Remember that the games are not for their own sake, but only a way to advance you along your unique path.

You can only be fair to others to the extent that you can put yourself in their place.

- * If you have not by nature a critical mind, your staying here is useless.

He who has freed himself from the disease of "tomorrow" has a chance to excel at the Games.

Blessed are those who are far advanced in the Games, and blessed are those that have never heard of them, but woe and grief to those just struggling to start out in them.

- * Rest comes not from the quantity but from the quality of sleep.
- * Sleep little without regret.

One of the best means for arousing the desire to excel at the games is to realize that you may die at every moment... But first you must learn how to keep it in mind.

Spiritual love evokes the same in response, Emotional (Emental?) love evokes the opposite. Physical love should never be used for extortion, kidnapping, robbery, etc.

Spiritual faith is freedom. Emotional (Emental?) faith is slavery. Mechanical (physical) faith is foolishness.

- * Hope, when bold, is strength. Hope with doubt, is cowardice. Hope with fear is weakness. Bold, Spiritual hope is strength. Hope with negative emotions such as anger, fear, doubt, jealousy, or boredom is weakness, cowardice, and ???.

* Man is given a definite number of experiences—economizing them, he prolongs his life.

Here there are neither Russians nor English, Jews nor Christians, but only those who pursue one aim—to be able to play the games.

* Where there is more, more is added; where there is little, even that is taken away. Christian parables

Freedom is a stick with many, many ends.

* Self initiation means never having to blame someone else for your lack of progress.

* People have the remarkable ability to major in minor things.

When your knowledge of the Games becomes the language of your mouth and the basis for your actions, you will understand.

* Maintaining sleep is a tacit conspiracy.

There is always a Game or three you can play.

* A sleeping man will be able to state the moments he was conscious; a conscious man will be able to state the moments he was asleep!

Game knowledge of things you have not yet fully accomplished on your unique life path will be as seen through a glass darkly.

Games are not going to make us, but by playing them hard and well we can make ourselves.

Be wary of asking permission to help another.

Sometimes you can see the shoes someone else is wearing, sometimes you can see your own, accomplishing either one can help with the other. When you have two or more people looking at the shoes, amazing things can be done.

Recognizing that you do not know is one of the greatest moments of knowing.

* Understanding trumps knowledge.

* Sacred cows function best if fed – or slaughtered.

* What a man sees when he looks at the world around him says more about the man than it does about the world.

Spiritual truths often get lost in the minutiae of definition.

To be or not to be may be the question; but to be and not to be is the answer.

Chapter 9

Crystal Vision

Amanon

Car girl, pichones

Fish in house on hill, geese in dry lake which eat the fish and mushroom like things growing around in lake violent dream after reading pamela's purgatory: driving areund in van with evil passenger going to some important event that he wants to keep me from. one person that I wanted to help has left back of van from early in dream, one other is still there with some phones and other gadgets, but not doing much. pov is driver passenger probably same person, guess who?

Chapter 10

The Perfect Diet aka Anti SAD Food Diet

This part is referring to food in the USA, but it seems likely that the situation is similar other places. The parts about starting points in order to find your perfect diet should be feasible anywhere, and may even be easier to implement in “less developed” countries.

Well, in this chapter we can hear out astute readers ears perking up and asking “The perfect diet? Do you really think you can find one diet that works for everyone?” And the answer to this question, of course, is no. What we are outlining here is, however a diet that anyone can try and eventually figure out what her exact, perfect diet consists of on any given day. In order to do this it will be necessary to fine tune the human machine on the Physical, Emotional, and Spiritual levels. Pretty much all of the food that you eat makes you sick in one way or another. In this regard, food can be divided into two broad categories, food that is spoiled, or rotten, and food that is not fit for human consumption in the first place. Much of your diet probably consists of foods that fit into both categories. This causes huge problems for anyone trying to advance along their own, personal, inner (spiritual) path. When there is a problem in the born level, such as when one consumes spoiled or inappropriate food, the whole organism functions poorly. (Have the card diagrams handy.) It should be obvious that problems in the jack and queen of diamonds, the born center, it will be likely to affect the learned center, jack and queen of spades, the learned center. If you are sick, you are not going to be able to walk, run, or play sports optimally. These two centers are on the same level, the physical, so it’s kind of obvious that they will be closely linked. If you are very skilled at any physical endeavor, playing pool for example, you may be able to notice that if your stomach is upset, you can not perform at the peak of your ability. The same kinds of things can be seen on the Emotional level. If your stomach is upset or your gut is aching, you will probably be in a bad mood and thinking bad thoughts. This is something that everyone should be able to see, both in themselves and in others. This type of observation is very useful and important in the Games. One way of looking at it is that your ability to engage the king of the center is impaired or absent. Our ability to engage the kings of the centers, which represent conscious effort with the purpose of progressing on our inner (spiritual) journey is paramount. Without the kings we can never reach the Spiritual level, and if one or more are damaged or debilitated, whatever contact with the Spiritual level we manage to gain, will be less than it could be.

One important food item is meat, and many people have various thoughts and opinions on this topic; a fair number of these have decided not to eat meat. They may have noticed that eating meat makes them sick, which is because all the meat they have ever eaten has been to some degree rotten. This is a very good observation, and a valid reason to stop eating these foods. Many have decided that it is wrong to kill animals, which is a wrong conclusion and indicates some wrong functioning on the Emotional level. Here is an interesting and important idea to ponder, if the lives of animals which are used for food have value, how do you advocate for people to stop eating them when this would mean that the vast majority of them would never come into existence, and many species might even go extinct? Thinking that animals should never be killed for food is an example of the centers on the Emotional level doing wrong work using wrong energy, specifically sexual energy. This type of energy can be recognized by noticing that a good and useful idea has been taken so far that it produces wrong and harmful results. It is very important to learn to recognize this type of thing and go against it. It is a very important idea to treat animals kindly and prevent them from being treated cruelly. "Practice love first on animals, they are more sensitive." But when you take it to the extreme of trying to keep animals from ever being used as food, you end up, in one way or another, actually harming the cause of the animals, which you started out trying to help.

There are several differences between humans and animals which are not generally known and understood. Animals are born complete, having whatever cards they are supposed to have to fulfill their function in nature. This may include some functions on the Spiritual level, for example herd animals will sacrifice themselves for the good of the herd, which is a function of Higher Emotional Center. In some ways they function at a higher level than humans because, being complete, functional machines, they do not get all the false negative emotions that people pick up through imitation of other humans. For an antelope, fear is a real, born center (instinctive) occurrence. They have all of the lower centers needed to form the Higher Emotional center, and it manifests in things like loyalty to the herd. In human beings the lower centers are so distorted from imitating bad stuff they encounter in other humans, especially on the Emental level, that they manifest little or nothing on the spiritual level, that is the Higher Emotional center. The reason that human beings exist is to follow their inner (spiritual) path, and this always entails reaching and perfecting not only their Higher Emotional centers, but their Higher Mental centers as well. Animals do not have the opportunity to develop their higher centers. They do not have the kings, they are only given the jacks and queens!

It is ironic that man's advantage over animals is also the cause of his downfall. In order for human beings to fulfill their destiny of developing their higher centers, they had to be given the ability to change themselves, using their own effort, the kings. Like the animals, we are only born with the jacks and queens. Thus, functioning mechanically from a very young age, we acquire all kinds of bad stuff in all the centers through imitation, causing our higher centers to stop functioning or in other words, causing us to lose contact with them. In order to start our return journey, we must clean up and repair all the centers, and fixing our diet is one very important part of this process. So we begin our quest for the perfect diet!

Salt is such a basic human need that in Roman times the soldiers were paid in salt, which is where our modern word salary comes from. In modern times there has been much ado about salt, a lot of it could be considered to be perpetrated by people stuck in yes or no thinking, and going way overboard by trying to suppress and even ban salt. Salt, or sodium chloride is necessary for all life to continue and thrive. We do, after all, all come from the ocean if you go far enough back in the evolutionary tree! Having proper levels of salt is essential for proper nerve function, fluid balance, muscle activity, and blood pressure. It is also important for overall cellular functioning. If you are making real efforts to fix your diet you should have no chance of consuming too much salt. The amount of salt that our bodies need varies, according to, drum roll please... you guessed it, how much salt you have eaten lately.

Luckily, our body has a very finely tuned mechanism to help us figure out how much salt to eat. If you have never known this before it is imperative that you ponder it for a while, and then practice getting the amount of salt in your diet right whenever you eat. All chefs and good cooks know about this, and deal with it in this way. When they are preparing a meal or recipe, they add less salt than the person eating the meal will want. That way, each individual can taste the food, and put on exactly the right amount of salt that their body needs right now, or in other words, salt it to taste. It is important to note that the correct amount of salt does not make the food taste salty, changes it from bland to just right. If your food tastes salty, it means you have put on too much salt.

Another health issue related to salt is goiter, which is a swelling of the thyroid gland which can be caused by iodine deficiency. The relation between goiter and iodine has been well known for around a hundred years, so you should use iodized salt to avoid this condition.

A Simple Starter Diet (SSD)

In the USA, almost all of the food is bad in one way or another. There are only two meats that are known to be ok, halal beef and lamb. These must be acquired either on the day they are killed or the following day, and immediately eaten or frozen. The only grain that works is white rice. Whole grain is no good. It is thought that some white rice products may have problems, so it's probably better not to get the cheapest products available. White rice, white rice flour, and white rice noodles from an oriental supermarket are probably good. Frozen peaches from HEB supermarket. Probably good up to one half pound to one pound per day.

There are two problems in our digestive systems which must be observed and dealt with separately. First there is acid indigestion or acid reflux. This is in the stomach. If you follow this SSD for a few days, weeks, or months, we would expect it to just go away.

The second digestive system problem we have is in our gut, or bowels. If you eat foods that give you an acid stomach, we would expect that problems in the gut would also ensue. This will manifest as diarrhea, excessive and overly stinky gas, and a nauseous feeling in the area below the stomach. Once again, we would expect this to drastically reduce or disappear after a few days, weeks, or months on the SSD.

The pay attention to your breath Game is crucial here, and it is also necessary to learn to see and remember what comes out the other end. All this has to do with the jack, queen, and king of diamonds. Learn to observe what is going on in your body. It is also important to pay attention to the other three centers and how your improved diet is affecting them, hopefully for the better. And of course, don't forget to put in as much effort as possible, exercise the kings, in all the centers.

Once you get to a more or less stable point in this diet, you can start adding in other things.

There are a lot of other foods about which we must write in the future.

Foods that are bad and not able to be made good. Citrus fruit of any kind. Oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, tangerines, mangos. Legumes, peas, beans, fresh frozen, or dried, red, green, spotted, lima, yellow, in pods, out of pods. Sugar of any kind. Honey is not known but very suspect, and probably not on our list to try any time soon.

Foods that are probably bad and can't be made good. Any type of birds. They are descendents of the dinosaurs and probably have mamal poison in them. Turkey, chicken, quail, gunie hen, pheasant.

Foods that are probably good if processed properly, i.e. acquired fresh and frozen promptly, maybe with a little citric acid sprinkled on. Probably should be limited to one half pound to one pound per day or less. This limit should probably be a combined total of all the fruits here. Peaches, pineapple, watermelon, cantelope, other melons, papaya.

Foods that are probably good if processed properly, i.e. acquired fresh and frozen promptly, maybe with a little citric acid sprinkled on. Probably should be limited to less than one half pound per day.

Mushrooms are probably good, dried or fresh, next on our list to try. They are evolutionarily according to genticis, closer to us than plants, so it seems likely they are good to eat.

Seafood, fish, shrimp, crab, lobster, clams. May be ok, need to get a supply of fresh, living specimin to try.

Olive may be ok to eat in limited quantity, i.e. a little on a small salad once a day. Tomatoes, green onions, jalapeno peppers probably ok. Other hot peppers probably ok. Sweet peppers, seems likely to be good, but have never been tried. Lettuce, green and red leaf maybe ok, romaine is too tough, i.e. it stays looking like it is ok to eat on the supermarket shelves too long. Probably best to get or grow live lettuce with roots, and just pick off a leaf or six, depending on the size.

Chapter 11

Skin the Largest Organ in the Body and the Immune system

The skin is the largest organ in the body and has several purposes including protection from pathogens and physical damage, regulating body temperature, providing sensory information, controlling evaporation, and production of vitamin D. It should come as no surprise that keeping our skin healthy is very important. Our skin has three main enemies, and we are in a constant, lifelong battle against them. First there is bacteria. There are many bad bacteria on our skin which cause things like Folliculitis, Impetigo, Cellulitis, and underarm odor. Fungi also cause various skin problems including ringworm, jock itch, nail fungus, and athlete's foot. The third, much less well known skin nemesis is demodex skin mites, both the follicorum and brevis. These microscopic bugs crawl around on your skin at the rate of about one inch per hour. These little arachnids have eight legs and are distant relatives of spiders and ticks. They are full of nasty bacteria and fungi which spew out into your body when they die, which they do after a couple of weeks or so. They can cause many different skin conditions including rosacea, rough and bumpy skin, flaking, discoloration, pimples, boils, and inflammation. In short, whatever is wrong with your skin, there is a very good chance that they play a role in it.

It is necessary to think about the fact that these little buggers crawl around on your skin at about one inch (2.5 cm) per HOUR. This means that they could travel from your feet to your groin in a day or so, and from head to toe in 2 or three days. One thing this means is that if you treat a small area for any particular symptom, they are going to be going into and out of that area the whole time! Another critical thing to understand is that the symptoms on your skin ARE NOT CAUSED BY THE LITTLE BUGS, PER SE, BUT BY YOUR IMMUNE SYSTEM ATTACKING THEM! As you get rid of these pests in one part of your body, your immune system will start chasing them in another. So if you treat your whole body at once, as soon as you get rid of these arachnids in one spot, some negative skin manifestation will pop up in another. This cycle of your body's immune system attacking the demodex skin mites, will have different manifestations on different parts of the body and sometimes just apparently random differences. Here are some different negative skin manifestations that have been observed on different parts of the body. Sores on arms and top of head. Redness, dryness and flakiness (sometimes turning into sores) on joints, elbows, knees, knuckles. Red or black spots that seem to be under the skin on arms, legs, and torso. Pimples, boils, sores, and various discoloration on face. Liver spots anywhere on body. Boils, pimples, sores, and major, painful swelling on scrotum. Sores, bumps, pimples swelling on feet and legs. Remember that all of these and more can occur together or separately all over your body.

There was once a man who had really bad sores on the tops of his arms and top of his head for many decades. The sores kind of moved around once they started, creeping along very, very slowly, kind of expanding on one side while healing on the other. They lasted for weeks, months, and one over a year! The sores grew various white things in them, which he carefully removed because the sores never healed until all the white things were gone. Sometimes after the sores healed leaving big scars, little white balls would remain, which kept growing until they were removed. On the plus side, after the sores were gone leaving the scars, they never reappeared on the same patch of skin. The man deduced that these were somehow related to his immune system because there seemed to be a limit on how many could exist at once. For a long time he thought, incorrectly, that it was his body fighting off skin cancer. Sometimes the sores would fill up with puss as if they were infected. The white things, or stuff, took various forms during the progression of these sores, ranging from fat white balls that looked like fish eggs, to white pillars going down into the pores, to kind of disorganized blobs, to a white sheath that made it look like the sore was healed, only to have it reappear a while later. When this man first heard of demodex skin mites, he had already started using calomine lotion on his feet, and had noticed that it also seemed to retard the growth of the white things/stuff significantly. He had only been putting it on the sores themselves, and not the surrounding skin. When he read about how these mites could crawl around on his skin he imagined that maybe that was what was happening with the sores, the mites crawling in and out and thereby surviving, both in and out of the wounds. So he started putting the calomine lotion (not store bought, but made of calomine clay mixed with water) over the whole of the areas where he had the sores. After a while, all of the sores went away. He spent several years with various parts of his body covered with this homemade calomine lotion, often having his whole body covered with it. As he expected, the sores, and other negative skin manifestations went here and there pretty much everywhere on his body. One noteworthy incident was the first time it went to his scrotum. He had been expecting odd and uncomfortable manifestations, but this is one he never would have imagined. His whole scrotum got filled with pimples, boils, and sores, and swelled up to about the size of a grapefruit! It was very, very painful. But since he had been expecting this kind of thing, if not anything quite this drastic, he did not freak out and run to the doctors, who would have had no idea what was going on. He just continued to apply his homemade calomine lotion, and after a few weeks it got better. There are several important patterns to note from these and subsequent events. First, once you start getting rid of the demodex skin mites, your symptoms will be varied and tend to move from one area to another, as your immune system targets different skin problems according to its plan as to what is the current “hot spot” or the most important thing to deal with immediately. The man’s scrotum became the “hot spot” quite a few times after the first round, but each time the negative manifestations were shallower and shallower and sparser and sparser. This more or less goes for other parts of the body too, but nowhere has it been as clearly noticeable and recognizable as the scrotum. It also seems that if you let them grow for a few weeks, they start causing more trouble again.

Here is the most important thing to take from this story. If you ever want to control these demodex skin mites on your body, you are going to have to cover your whole body with the homemade calomine lotion. This will probably end up being something like a weekly treatment. (Could be more or less depending on the individual circumstances.) When you do this, you will have skin problems manifest on different parts of your body, and if you freak out, thinking “Oh no!!! This stupid calomine lotion made my scrotum swell up like a cantalope!” (Probably, in most cases, it will be something else that is somewhat less alarming.) You will stop the treatment, and the mites will happily grow, breed and when they die explode and leave all the nasty fungus and bacteria wherever they happen to be!

Chapter 12

Exercise

Daniel Lieberman

Chapter 13

Doctor Doctor

Chapter 14

Odds and Ends

Smoking Story

There once was a man who was born addicted to alcohol and cigarettes. He realized that this was the case rather late in his life, when he heard that for most people their first cigarette was a very traumatic experience, whereas for him it had been like going to heaven. This did not surprise him very much because he knew that his mother had smoked and drank while she was pregnant with him. He had not started smoking until late in his teens, whereas most of the cool kids had been smoking since middle school. The man's parents had quiet time every day around five pm where children should be seen and not heard, while the adults had their first drinks of the evening. The man's father had told him that if one was going to drink, you might as well get drunk, so this is how the man drank for a couple of decades. At a certain point the man decided to quit drinking and did so for about a decade by going to a lot (3 per day) of AA meetings. The man also quit smoking during this period.

Around the end of this ten year period the man acquired a certain Spiritual Teacher who helped the man out very much. He was a very kind, patient, and intelligent teacher, who had made some amazing discoveries which were very important and useful to those trying to advance along their own inner (spiritual) path. When the man reached a certain purported milestone on his inner (spiritual) journey, the teacher told the man that he could start drinking again. This started the man on a twenty five year odyssey in relation to these two kings, drinking and smoking. (Not to be confused with the four kings which represent our efforts in relation to the Games.) The man had observed over his lifetime certain people who could have a cigarette or two when they went out at night, and then not smoke the next day, or even later on in the night. (Cigarette addicts secretly hate these people.) The man really liked his drinking and smoking, and therefore decided that, as long as it wasn't putting him in the poor house, or taking food off his children's table, he could allow himself this pleasure. He spent about 25 years trying out different approaches towards his drinking, and in the end got to the point where he could go out every now and then and monitor his drinking to make sure he didn't go over the legal limit for driving, and when he stayed home he could drink sometimes more or sometimes less, depending on anything or nothing.

It turns out that trying to control these two vices is a lot more difficult than trying to just quit. (If you want to quit any particular bad thing you may be doing, just seek out the appropriate 12 step group. These people are kind, generous, and mostly wise beyond their years.) It is also a very good and important thing to do if you want to succeed in the Games, i.e. advance along your own personal inner pathway. At the same time that the man had been trying to control his vices, he had been trying to improve his diet. It's very difficult to concentrate on your inner (spiritual) journey when you are sitting on or leaning over the toilet because of bad food you have eaten. All of these three things, drinking, smoking, and eating are very tightly tied to our Born center. The urges to eat, drink, and smoke or not at any particular moment are all coming from our body, and are all intertwined with and related to each other. The food journey can be divided into two journeys, removing foods journey and the adding foods journey.

IF YOU DON'T REMOVE THE BAD FOODS BEFORE YOU PUT IN THE GOOD ONES, YOU WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO MAKE ANY PROGRESS OR VERIFY ANYTHING HAVING TO DO WITH THE BORN CENTER.

IF YOU DON'T REMOVE THE BAD FOODS BEFORE YOU PUT IN THE GOOD ONES, YOU WILL SEVERELY LIMIT YOURSELF NOT ONLY IN THE BORN CENTER, BUT IN ALL CENTERS, AND WILL MAKE MANY THINGS VERY DIFFICULT OR IMPOSSIBLE TO VERIFY.

The last part of the remove food journey involves trying not to get the poops, i.e. have diarrhea, which of course is commonly and easily caused by eating or drinking the wrong things. It is necessary to learn to pay careful attention to both what goes in and what comes out. The man was getting pretty good at this by this time, having practiced it for many decades.

The man had also seen an online video which mentioned self hypnosis, something he had heard of but never actually tried. The technique, which was briefly outlined in the video basically consisted of telling yourself that you would like to breathe in nice clean fresh air rather than dirty smelly smoke. This made a lot of sense so the man started practicing this whenever he got an urge to smoke and he did not want to smoke. After a couple of weeks it seemed that the practice had little or no effect. Then one morning he had an insight, and was quite certain that it would turn out to be correct. What he needed to do was, instead of imagining fresh air where he was, at the present time, he needed to substitute memories from his childhood, in places that had always been special to him. When he tried this, he immediately knew that it had worked, so he did it for a couple of days just to verify and make sure about it.

The idea behind this whole exercise, which the man had spent a couple of decades trying to perfect, was to be able to, at appropriate intervals, (not every night, but indeterminate other than that) and have whatever number of drinks seemed good, and whatever cigarettes with which seemed appropriate to accompany them. So the man drank most of the first shot, just a little more quickly than normal, (He sipped the shots and used them for mouthwash as was his custom.) Then he smoked his first cigarette in about two days, and immediately farted out a small amount of clear liquid. It wasn't even enough to get his to pants, so after cleaning himself up he considered the situation. (It is interesting to note that smoking the cigarette wasn't even that wonderful.) What this meant was that the cigarettes were giving him the poops, something he had thought of before, but considered unlikely. This conclusion caused the man to realize that his situation was hilariously ironic: He had just spent decades seeking and actually accomplishing something that was now of very little use to him, because would seldom or never want to smoke badly enough to give himself the poops. So, in order to verify this, the man drank another four shots without smoking, during which time he had no more opooping problems. He then started smoking again, and sure enough got the poops fairly quickly.

So, what can we take from this story? The simplest lesson is a very familiar one, smoking is bad for you so don't do it. This is something that it doesn't seem should require decades of experimentation to verify. Common sense should be able to tell us that inhaling hot smoke into your lungs probably isn't such a good idea. This is a very good example of how buffers can let us do stupid things without admitting that they are stupid. These buffers are always tied to various negative emotions to which we cling desperately, in this case various petty and imaginary fears.

There is something much more interesting hidden here, so let's see what it is! Here is a practical application of the law of three to the task of fulfilling our spiritual (inner) destiny and duty. The self-hypnosis can be seen as a Game, or prayer, we are trying to change something in ourselves. This starts in Intellectual center at the appropriate time, when we want to smoke. Here you could substitute any mechanical manifestation to which you would like to apply the Games. You have to start with small things, because when that guy flips you the bird on the highway, it's too late. (Learning to control our mechanical reactions to this kind of thing is absolutely something we can learn to control.) So let's use a small thing as an example in this case. Let's say you get upset with your child when he leaves his empty water bottles on the table, rather than throwing them away. First, you formulate a statement "I'm not going to snap at my child about the water bottles" Then you come up with a moment, or a few moments involving your child that have a very strong emotional quality for you. Maybe when they run up to you wanting to be picked up. These can be more general too, maybe how wonderful it was spending the summer with them in the past. We remember these moments because they have connected us with the Higher Emotional center, and we can use them to aid us in our Games. The fact that we are intentionally doing this in real time, in order to traverse our inner (spiritual) landscape, shows us that the king of hearts, which is always involved when we make effort. So we end up with the following: The higher (Higher Emotional center, understanding, desire to help others) blends with the lower (Intellectual center, where we formulated our aim.) in order to actualize the middle (Emotional center, king of hearts, involving effort on our part) and thus becomes either higher for the preceding lower (Intellectual center) or lower for the succeeding higher. (Higher Emotional center) It's pretty easy to understand that the Higher Emotional center is above the Emotional center, but perhaps not so clear that the intellectual center is below the Emotional center. Here is the key: The Intellectual center is below the Emotional center as we currently are because of its speed, or more precisely its lack thereof. The Intellectual center is our slowest center. The centers on the Physical level function much faster, and the Emotional center should function faster still, but is probably around the same speed as the Physical level centers in practice. As we play these Games we gain experience, building our Higher Emotional center little by little. We will be able to add many memories to our repertoire of moments we can use as emotional fuel for our journey. Sometimes the memory of crisp, clean country air from our childhood can be the most powerful and wonderful of all!

Much of the preceding seems to have gone by the wayside due to dietary discoveries having to do with rare meat, shrimp, bananas and pineappple. It needs to be rewritten.

Chapter 15

Prayer

Many people, both the religious and the not religious, have considered questions like: If there is a God, and he is good and all-knowing and all-powerful, then why does he let so much evil go on in the world, why doesn't he answer our prayers? These Games are primarily about finding our own inner (spiritual) path. If we want to help others, we must realize that in order to do that, we must first realize that we need to change ourselves and then look to help others to do the same. So here are two aspects of prayer that need to be addressed. What are we praying for and how do we pray? If we realize that spiritual writings are about spiritual (inner) things, then we will realize that we should be praying for change inside of ourselves. Once we realize this we can start to practice praying and see if it works. Like any other games, it takes practice to learn how to pray, and if your "practice" consists of doing it completely wrong, you won't get any where. If you spend years, or even decades, on your knees praying for an end to hunger in the world, something which has surely been done repeatedly in history, it's like trying to learn to play tennis with a ping pong paddle. (Probably worse because whatever nonsense you are attempting with the ping pong paddle, you may at least get some exercise!) It is also necessary to know what to pray for. If you ask God to make you a better at praying than your friend, nothing good can come of it, and the best case scenario is that you get no answer. If you ask God to help you learn to pray better and properly, and to show you how to help your friend and receive help from your friend, and you do it having studied and understood the cards diagrams, and you do it with the tenacity and determination of a mother defending her child, you will get good results.

Another aspect of praying that we need to understand and master is that it works a whole lot better when you have help. By striving together we can accompoish much more than the sum of what we cam accomplish separately. In order to demonstrate (verify) this, try to play the pay attention to your breath while eating Game alone for a while. It is definately possible to practice this game alone and to make some, perhaps even a lot, of progress. Now get a friend or companion and try it together for a few months. You can certainly, even only as a thought experiment, see that this would work much better! Now, let's look at some further refinements. If you and your friend had lunch together every day you would get much better results than you could get alone. If you lived together and practiced together at every meal, you would get still better results. And if you had a group all practicing together, the results would be still better yet. It is important to note that once again this is going to be a geometric or arithmetic progression, rather than a linear one.

All of this would continue for some time until, at some point, the fussing, fighting and arguing started, and then that would be the end of it, right? Well, hopefully not, because these are just the kind of negative emental manifestations with which these games are designed to deal. It is, so to speak, where the rubber meets the road, the women separated from the girls, etc. etc. etc. This is actually your golden opportunity, because these types of negative emotions are where the largest part of our energy is expended. While you can save a lot of energy by transforming pleasant emotions, unpleasant and negative emotions are where the vast majority of our energy is directed, and therefore where we have the greatest chance to save this energy and redirect it towards propeling us along our inner (spiritual) path. We must first learn how to stop expressing these negative emotions, and simultaneously learn how to transform them into positive emotions, which can only exist on the spiritual level. There are several things you need to keep in mind here. The intellectual center, the first tame elephant, the jack and queen of spades, can help out here if it has learned about the Games and the diagrams, but it is going to be late to the party because it is too slow to stop these negative emotions in real time. It is like trying to use the intellectual center to direct every movement while walking down stairs. Too slow. The emotional center is supposed to work very much faster than the born and learned centers. When it is ensnared in these types of negative emotions, it can only work at about the same speed as the physical level centers do. This is why we need to have all our forces ready and be constantly exercising and practicing with them. Intentional effort, directed with the idea of moving yourself along your personal inner (spiritual) path, is what gets the kings out of bed and starts to strengthen them. These kings will eventually start to give us more and more and longer and longer contact with the spiritual level. And when we function from the spiritual level, we are much faster than any of the lower centers, and eventually most (maybe even all?) of these pesky little negative emotions will be swatted away like little flies.

Now, you may be wondering, how did we get from prayer to playing a game? This is another aspect of prayer that is not very well known. Most people, whether religious or not, think of prayer as something that you do on Sundays in church, or maybe when you go to bed at night. There is nothing wrong with praying in church or when you go to bed, it's kind of a more the merrier situation. It is a valid and important way of looking at the games to say that their objective is to teach you to pray better and more. Two Games immediately come to mind. If you take communion in your church, can you practice the pay attention to your breath Game at that time? There is another Game that is apropos in this context, one that is called Lying still for one hour. This is a good thing to do every night when you go to sleep. And no, you don't have to give up an hour of your sleep time. In these Games we always try to do things that are smart and clever, and disrupting your sleep is neither. The idea, on the contrary, is to get to sleep faster and better as you progress on your inner (spiritual) path. So after whatever prayer you decide to practice when you lie down to sleep, try lying still for an hour until you get to sleep, and you should find that you get to sleep faster and sleep better as you progress on your inner (spiritual) journey. There is always a Game you can play, and the more you add to your repertoire the better will be your progress.

If a prayer is formulated in such a way that it emphasizes the idea that God is inside of us, it will tend to exacerbate and increase bad ego in us. It will also be very unwieldy and clumsy, our language does not contain this type of words and ideas. (This is because we do not contain this type of words and ideas.) On the other hand, if it is written so as to highlight the idea that God is external, it will tend to reduce these malicious aspects of ourselves. In the amazingly vast spectrums of personal interactions, it will often be good to compose prayers that incorporate both views. Here is such a prayer:

A little commentary on and explanation of terms in the prayer. Amanon are little angels that start to grow and multiply in the higher centers when you start down your inner (spiritual) path. They exist, to some extent, in everyone, but our lower, base impulses tend to keep us from seeing or interacting with them. Emental refers to our thoughts and emotions which are very closely connected. See the diagram Man as a 3 Story Being for basic info about this. Wherever you are when you start your inner journey, it will involve constant evaluation and reevaluation of what you are, and what you want, need, and have the duty to become. This is not set in stone, but an excellent starting point, probably something that would be very advantageous for memorization. Pondering, contemplating, and observing your responses to this prayer will provide you a very solid foundation from which to embark on your personal odyssey.

0) Thank you for getting me through this little financial rough spot, small glitch in my relationship, insignificant food issue, etc.

This one is optional and eventually you may no longer need it and thus remove it from your prayer. The ideas are to identify whatever problems you have in life at the moment and put them in perspective, erring on the side of making them smaller than they seem. Our problems always seem a lot bigger than they really are due to the negative emotions in the emotional center, which come from the jack and queen of hearts. Real fear comes mostly from the born center, the jack and queen of diamonds. We want to learn to distinguish between these and let the diamonds guide us to solve our problems, while going against the false fear that comes from the hearts. We also want to understand that the problem is already fixed, which it is for you while you are lying in bed. There is nothing you can do until morning, and staying up all or half the night will be VERY counter productive. You need to get a good night's sleep so you have a clear head in the morning and be able to better deal with your situation.

The idea of this part is to see whatever bad stuff is going on as small and already over with. It comes first so that you can afterwards concentrate on the important stuff, which is what is inside you. External things can always disappear, and eventually they will, one way or another. We will keep the progress we make on our inner (spiritual) path for at least the rest of our lives.

1) Thank you Lord, show me the way back home to you, Lord.

This part is for those who can bring themselves to pray. We need to put in a separate section somewhere for those who can not yet.

Giving thanks and feeling gratitude is always a good thing. In the beginning it may feel a little awkward, you may need to use some effort (the kings) but as you practice and start to connect more and more with the spiritual level, and save energy for doing so, it will become easier and easier to understand and see that you really do have much to be thankful for, especially when viewed from the perspective of your inner (spiritual) journey. Every time you gain a little knowledge and understanding your ability to love and appreciate progress on your inner path will increase.

The higher (understanding) blends with the lower (knowledge) in order to actualize the middle (king of hearts) and thus becomes either higher (king of hearts) for the preceding lower (knowledge) or lower (king of hearts) for the succeeding higher (understanding).

Look at the Man as a 3 Story Being diagram, and go through the preceding sentence while finding the words and cards on the diagram. Here, the king of hearts is represented by the word love on the diagram. (or perhaps visa versa?) Ponder this carefully, it is very important. Don't rush through it...

Now, take a look at the cards Spiritual Level diagram and notice that the whole of the emotional center is the king in the higher emotional center. When the emotional center acts as the lower for the preceding higher, we have another triad coming into existence, one in which the higher is the Intellectual center (the lowest part of the higher mental center) and the lower is the emotional center, which are blending in order to form the middle, which is the higher emotional center. Also note that the emotional center as a whole forms the king in the higher emotional center. Well, my mind is completely blown, so I'm going to take off an hour, or maybe the rest of the evening :-))

Harnel-miaznel blending. conscious labor' and 'intentional suffering

The word back here is very important. Do not ignore it or forget it. There are certain parts of you that will try to make you do things like forgetting or ignoring this word. "What's the big deal? It's only one little word. Who needs it?" So what is the big deal, and why is this little word so important? Because this inner (spiritual) journey upon which we have embarked is not a trip to a strange, alien land, but a return home to a place more familiar and more a real home for us than any physical place can ever be. This is related to the idea that Higher Centers are fully functional but Man, in his present state, has little or no contact with, or control or knowledge of them. As we grow in life we acquire much wrong stuff, ideas, feelings, and habits, to name a few. Over the course of our lives we gradually lose contact with our higher centers. Another aspect of this is the idea that children have no buffers, which is why we must try to become as little children. What these buffers do is to keep us from seeing the contradictions in ourselves, from seeing all of the really horrible stuff that we are and do. These parts of us are well aware that they will have to die if we are successful in our quest to follow our true inner (spiritual) path by means of the Games. They control us through negative emotions like fear, so they would love for us to imagine that the Games are taking us to a strange, evil, foreign place, rather than BACK to our true home.

2) Show me how to help everyone, everywhere all the time.

This is kind of a generic version of this prayer line, and a rather advanced version. It is good for everyone to leave in their prayer and contemplate from time to time. It will be especially interesting and useful to notice how your perception and understanding of this idea changes over months and years. You should add as many people to the end of this prayer line according to your current situation in life. If you have a problem with anyone, you should ask to forgive and help them. In most cases you want to make up, i.e. make amends in person too. If people have tried to kill you or have you killed however, you should probably stay away from them. You really need to forgive them in your own heart if you want to make good progress on your own personal inner (spiritual) path. This is a hard row to hoe, however, and you will probably end up having to go through many “layers of the onion” before you get it really finished. Our ability to deceive ourselves in things like this is truly prodigious. This has to do with buffers, which are among our most difficult obstacles, and which we must clearly see and overcome in order to “become as little children.”

3) Show me how to keep the Amanon, what you want me to become, and teach me how to get there.

The Amanon are like little angels we have inside of ourselves that need to be protected from the lower parts of ourselves. This is what it means to keep the Amanon, to protect them from bad things inside of ourselves. They live on the Spiritual level, in the Higher Emotional center. There are other beings inside of us other Game pieces, which reside on the lower levels. They form a group around our interest in and desire to follow the Games, or in other words our unique, personal, inner (spiritual) path. Since these lower Game pieces live on the lower levels, they cannot see so well what is above them, on the Spiritual level. The Amanon live in and come from the Spiritual level, so they are better able to show us what we need to become, and help us figure out how to get there. Keeping the Amanon involves fighting negative emotions, and going against our lower, most base, sexual desires.

4) Show me how to keep the Amanon, how to know, love, understand, see, and cherish them; and how to nurture them so they grow and multiply amazingly quickly and well.

Here the Amanon pop up again, but this time in a slightly different context. We envision our whole spiritual journey, from the Emental level through to the top of the Spiritual level as a five step process. We start in the Intellectual center (know) and proceed through Emotional center (love), Higher Emotional center (understand), Higher Mental center (see), and finally to The Crown (cherish). The Crown is a conception of God which is the absolute peak of what we, as human beings can glimpse even with the help of our higher centers. Glimpse, however we can, and we should do so every now and then, and watch how our conception of The Crown changes over days, months, years, and decades. Ask, and ye shall receive, knock, and it shall be opened. Here we are asking whatever our current conception of God is to show us something better, the best that we can currently receive. By making one little baby step at a time over and over, with a determination to never give up, you will come to places that you can't yet imagine!

In the second part of this line of the prayer we segue from looking at the Amanon as a path to seeing them as individual Game pieces. We have Game pieces on all levels of our being, and in all centers. They can be divided up into groups in various ways. One particularly useful way to group the Game pieces is according to their interest in an usefulness to the Games. Imagine this, since you are reading this, the information you are being exposed to is entering into your Emental level. This will cause certain mechanical reactions in the jack and queen of both hearts and spades. You probably have some that are interested, think this is cool, others that are skeptical, and still more that are downright antagonistic. If the first two groups can band together and survive for a while, over time others will notice and come join the party. This is a necessary first step, and eventually it should lead to the appearance of the kings, which can open the way towards higher centers.

5) Show me multitudinous Amanon and other Game pieces within myself, and many, many, many Games to play with them.

The Games are predicated on the idea that we are not what we should be and would like to improve ourselves. To that end we need to observe different parts of ourselves. Previously, some of these different parts have been called I's. As in "Don't say I. or I want to go home." This leads to a lot of awkwardness, confusion, and difficulty in communication. You can be sure that we have plenty of these kinds of things without introducing any more when it is not absolutely necessary. Therefore we use the term Game

Pieces. Game pieces are a way of looking at things that are inside of us. One very usefull and important way to see this is to thik about centers and the different parts of the centers, which are represented by the jacks, queens, and kings. These can be further divided into parts of parts represented by the 2, 3, 4, then 5, 6, 7, followed by 8, 9, 10 respectively. This has not been included in the diagrams because it is way too complicated and confusing. It is outside the scope of this little introductory volume. By assimilating the knowledge here and practicing the Games, you will be able to move very far along your own personal inner (spiritual) path. These Games can be seen as just a few introductory ideas to get you started. Once you have been playing for a while you will start to realize just how huge your inner (spiritual) landscape is. The possibilities stretch out to the horizon and beyond. After you get started you will soon be able to keep yourself headed in the right direction, with a little help from your friends, of course. There will always be new Games to be discovered, ranging from subtle insights and mild corrections to completely new ideas that blast out of the heavens like a huge meteor, illuminating the night and showing us previously unimagined territory! There is no end to the wonders that can be discovered navigating the hills and valleys, and searching the nooks and crannies of your own personal Inner (spititual) kingdom! And hidden throuout this vast land are creatures of every description, ready to make friends or tear you to pieces; gardens, thickets and mazes, and all manner of fantastic and fascinating machines, some old and rusted, but eager to be cleaned, fixed, and shinedothers brand new, just invented, and ready to be learned about, played with, and improved.

6) Show me how to obtain whatever I need physically, ementally, and spiritually, to accomplish everything you want me to accomplish in this lifetime and beyond.

Now that we know that we exist of three levels and need to advance on all of them, it is a good idea to pay attention to this and try to get what we need. Remember that in these Games we do not just ask God for something and then lie around on our lazy rear ends waiting to get it. It has been said that God helps those who help themselves, and in these Games you need to take this to heart (king of hearts) and act on it in whatever way you can at any given moment. If someone is hungry, you give them a sandwich, not a sermon. But once this is taken care of, (To have in their planetary body everything satisfying and really necessary for their planetary body.) We can turn to the Emental and Spiritual levels in whatever ways we are able and in the most appropriate way we can figure out. In these Games we have to be (and become) sly men, always using every resource available to us, and constantly pushing our limits, which is a very good way to discover and develop new skills, talents, and tactics.

It is important to realize that no one really knows what happens after we die. Anyone who claims they do is suffering from having sexual energy run amok on their Emental level, a condition which is fairly easy to recognize by observing that someone is taking an extreme position in relation to a particular issue or subject, and insisting on a particular, or sometimes only two possible outcomes, solutions, possibilities etc. Such a person is stuck in the jack and queen of spades, which can't count past two. This state is necessary for a host of malificent negative emotions which we in the games are in the process of eliminating. So watch out for this yes or no thinking in yourself and others, and learn to extricate yourself from it. Do you really need to reply to that idiot on social media? Do you really need to jump into that argument at the water fountain, or with your husband or wife? Not engaging in this type of behavior is a valid, useful, and important strategy if you want to advance on your inner (spiritual) path.

As to what happens after you die, this is a fruitful thing to ponder, contemplate, and meditate about, as long as you keep in mind that this is something that has never been verified, and can not be verified at this time. Just because it is written in a book is not a verification that something is true. Just because we haven't been able to observe something yet does not mean that it doesn't or can't exist. The amount of stuff that science knows that we don't know, especially in the realms of dark matter, dark energy, and quantum physics, leaves plenty of room for the possibility of some kind of existence after death. Maybe it will turn out that we are some kind of dark matter collectors and when we die we go to the kingdom of dark energy where, if we have collected enough dark matter during our lives, we get a job with the dark energy king!

7) Show me how to see situations and people in life that evoke pleasant, unpleasant, and negative mechanical emental manifestations, and how to transform them.

This has to do with getting rid of buffers, which we must accomplish in order to become as little children, who can see things much more clearly in some ways because they do not yet have these buffers completely established. Buffers keep one part of ourselves from seeing another, contradictory part. This allows us to do all manner of horrible things without feeling too bad about it. We make excuses, self justify, blame it on someone else, say we are just being honest, say they deserved what they got, say our anger is righteous, and even a good thing. We are scared of the most ridiculous imaginary things, while letting the figurative freight train repeatedly demolish us and the symbolic stampede trample us day after day. Here you can easily imagine the jacks and queens of hearts and spades going crazy, running around causing havoc, not only on the Emental level, but the Physical and Spiritual ones as well. But just knowing that all this is going on, and even actually seeing it happen, doesn't necessarily just make it dissappear. This is a very clear and concise formulation of something we need to be able to see, and what we need to learn to do about it. While it is imperative to learn to transform pleasant and unpleasant emotions, from which we will stop a constant trickle of energy loss, learning to stop expressing, and to go against, negative emotions, and to transform them into positive emotions gives the huge amounts of energy that we need to really triumph in the battles!

8) Give me really cool dreams that I can remember, understand, and apply to the Amanon, the Games, and myself.

Dreams can come from any part of ourselves, from any center or part of a center. Mostly they come from the Born, Learned, and Emotional centers. The Intellectual center mostly shuts down when we sleep in our beds. It is interesting to note that these three centers are those that make up the Higher Emotional center. Dreams can also be more or less based on reality. Nightmares are pretty much wholly based on the imaginary fears that exist due to imitation in our Emotional centers, and keep them functioning in a way that ensures we will remain in this hell for our whole lives. The best way to deal with nightmares is to not express negative emotions, to go against them, and to learn to transform them into Positive emations, remembering that Positive emotions only exist in higher centers. As you progress along your own personal inner (spiritual) journey, nightmares will recede and be replaced with pleasant dreams, which might sometimes have a spiritual (inner) meaning from which you can benefit. It should be noted though that it is fairly unusual to make significant discoveries this way, so don't start writing down all your dreams every day because it will waste a lot of time with very little return on your investment. It is, however, a good idea to quickly remember your dreams after you wake up in the morning. It is not uncommon to get little tips about our inner (spirityal) path from our dreams.

There are a couple of characters that you can look out for in your dreams that may be significant. The Higher Emotional center is generally portrayed by girl or woman. She will be very attractive, but not in an overtly sexual way. She may show you things, or try to get you to complete tasks for her. If she talks her messages will be short and to the point, but not necessarily easy to understand without some time and reflection. She may show you several scenarios which demonstrate the same point in different ways. If there are bad or scary people involved, they will not manifest as a nightmare per se, i.e. scaring you so much that you wake up, but will be an interesting, albeit not entirely pleasant part of the story or scene. These bad guys can manifest from either first person or third person point of view. Either way, you can be sure that there is some unbecoming aspect of your being that she wants you to concentrate on with your Games. This kind of dream that has a kind of uncomfortable feel to it, but is not a nightmare, can also happen without a female character in it. Here is a takeaway: Higher Emotional center, if personified in a dream, is likely to be a female character to whom you feel drawn, but in an emotional way as opposed to a sexual way. Unpleasant characters are reflections of things in yourself that you put effort (kings of centers) into in your Game playing.

Then there is Silent Man, who is a representation of Higher Mental center. He doesn't talk much, and when he does it may be in a foreign, unintelligible language. Sometimes he wears a business suit, sometimes rags. He has all kinds of really, really cool stuff, toys, gardens, machines, caves filled with cool stuff, campsites, and even whole worlds. You just know that there is an amazing organization behind all of his bric-a-brac, but it is just too far above you to understand. Getting a glimpse of things that are far, far beyond our ability to comprehend can remind us of how far we still have to go, show us the wonder awaiting us if we persist, and spur us to make ever more and more, and better and better efforts (Kings).

As a closing thought, here is a passage from a science fiction story that was written as an allegory to reveal many things about man's inner voyage:

"All the beings of this planet then began to work in order to have in their consciousness this Divine function of genuine conscience, and for this purpose, as everywhere in the Universe, they transubstantiated in themselves what are called the 'being-obligoian-strivings' which consist of the following five, namely:

"The first striving: to have in their ordinary being-existence everything satisfying and really necessary for their planetary body.

"The second striving: to have a constant and unflagging instinctive need for self-perfection in the sense of being.

“The third: the conscious striving to know ever more and more concerning the laws of World-creation and World-maintenance.

“The fourth: the striving from the beginning of their existence to pay for their arising and their individuality as quickly as possible, in order afterwards to be free to lighten as much as possible the Sorrow of our COMMON FATHER.

“And the fifth: the striving always to assist the most rapid perfecting of other beings, both those similar to oneself and those of other forms, up to the degree of the sacred “martfotai” that is up to the degree of self-individuality.”

Chapter 16

Purgatory - Conscience, Understanding, Helping Others

These Games can be seen as aids to help us through purgatory which, like the kingdom of heaven is within us.

To awake, to die, to be born again; a death of self, a death to all. Paul died daily, good advice. Yet death of self, death to all, is a real requirement and cannot be reached without intentional efforts and knowledge.

As we each advance on our own spiritual path, developing conscience, understanding, objectivity and impartiality, we will become more and more the same, which can help verify that what we are doing is real and that we are heading in the right direction.

I kept my aim before me at all times. My wish was the fuel. Importance generates all actions. This Work is the most important thing in my life above all things. Above all things. Life provides all we need in order to work on ourselves. Promote integrating this work in everything you do.

My objective is to serve the Absolute, to achieve the highest that a man can attain. It is my evolutionary right. I want to become conscious... generated from inner authenticity which permanently modifies my being... to become like an angel representing a higher order of organization.

Chapter 17